Live on the Line Giving the referees a hard time at the girls district basketball game is senior class president Ian Stewart. "I think identity is a crisis, because so many people try to be so many different things. It's good for some, but it hurts some others. Some just take advantage of what identity has to offer, and some get too caught up because they try to be something they're not. With my position, I almost feel like I've just been given an identity over the past four years. I don't follow that though, I follow my heart," Stewart said.

Pass It On Sharing a laugh between classes are freshmen Brendon O'Connell and Craig Thomas. "Being the 'Little OC' has had its ups and downs. It's good to know people right off the bat the first couple weeks of school, but then I'd like to form my own identity too, which is a little hard to do because of my brother. I try to just have fun and laugh it up with my friends," O'Connell said.

I'm too Sexy for my Shirt Eating an Alaskan Cow-Mouse and feeling a little sick from it, is junior Keith Carver. "I feel identity is a huge part of being a student. But for me, instead of trying to walk around looking sexy, I let my 'inner-Carl' show," Carver said.

Wide-eyed Wonder "Identity is a special thing to me, except for when you get your wisdom teeth pulled and you look ugly and are rudely interrupted by yearbookers taking your picture," sophomore Bev Twiss said.

i·den·ti·ty;

n. Who a person is, or what a thing is.

Since 1930, Marshall High School has been identified with its mascot- the Redskins. Recently, the Redskin nickname has spurred controversy in the Marshall community and in the surrounding area. With this as fuel, the school has begun a search for a new identity. However, to the students who live within the halls, finding a new identity is a familiar process. "I think everyone forms their own identity by not conforming to the rest of the group, but there are also those who form their identity by not being unique at all," senior Collin Vincent said.

"I hope that I can keep doing my own thing so that by my senior year I will have had the chance to be involved in many different opportunities," freshman Nichole Anderson said. And so, as the school marches towards the birth of a new era, the students of Marshall continue their search for an ever-current identity.

Different Races, Different Faces
All Assume the Role of a Student

Waking up early and coming to school is the only part of student life that is the same for everyone. Different classes, different teachers, and different activities divide and unite the student body. Some play sports. "I play varsity basketball and soccer," sophomore Patrick McCloskey said.

Some have a job outside of school. "I work at the outrageously awesome K-mart," senior Danae Huggett said. Some find their own recreation. "After school, I go home and watch Pop Up Video," sophomore Tim Polcyn said.

Many lifestyles make the small town school diverse, but with all the diversity is peace and unity.

Shocked with Excitement Being a freshman means that experiencing new activities, such as dances, becomes a normal routine. "I was just so pumped that I was at the snow ball. Plus the music was awesome," freshman Becky Kish said.

A True Lady Being a lady implies a well-mannered young woman that dresses with the finest new style and dines with the utmost respect. "I always eat like this in front of people," junior Devin Thomas said.

Little Drummer Boy Students find many activities to occupy themselves outside of school. "I like to go to toy stores and hang out with some elementary kids. Nothing like rockin' out with some Play Skool drums," senior Billy Ramano said.

Putting Her Neck on the Line Being the president requires being involved in many events such as the homecoming games pictured here. "I have faith that my crew will come through with an awesome victory," Broyles said. The sophomore class came out with a third place finish. "Not the best, but not the worst," Broyles said.

Days i Recall Being Wonderful

Individual students at MHS come together for another week of good times and great outfits.

Did you get dressed in the dark this morning? On any other day this might be taken as an insult, but during homecoming week, it's known to be a source of pride. With homecoming events, floats, contests, and all of the dressing up, some students see homecoming week as a little overwhelming. "Since I just moved here from New Jersey, and especially since I was a freshman, I was very hesitant going into the week. It turned out to be fun, though," freshman Amber Petersen said. On the other hand, some people may be torn apart by this week. "I was heartbroken because it was my last year. What will I do now?" senior Jason Wirth said.

Mad Hatter's Tea Party "I got the hat from a crazy friend of mine. It was very crazy," freshman Darren Deweese said. Deweese said that he was thinking over good times throughout the week of his first homecoming with freshmen friends Kate Grooms and Kara Evans.

TOGA! TOGA! TOGA! Showing off his homemade toga while eating lunch is senior Mike Driscoll. "I enjoyed showing some skin in school. I even made everything by myself! It's hard, because you do get a little cold though," Driscoll said.

Pour Some Mayonnaise On Me While serving herself some mayonnaise at lunch, junior Alice Cavinder displays her homecoming Crazy Day outfit. "I got most of my clothes from Kmart," Cavinder said. According to Cavinder, the best day of homecoming week is Crazy Day.

Hit Me Baby One More Time Eating lunch Spears style on Crazy Day is junior Cam Miller. "I was trying to pull off the male version of the Britney Spears fad, but I couldn't sit down because my outfit was too tight. Come on though, look at my legs...need I say any more," Miller said.

Whooo Are All These People? Seen sitting along "senior wall" checking out all the underclassmen's Crazy Day outfits is senior Jenna Hurd. "It's a fun day to go crazy. I wore what I wore because it was 80s crazy style, which is always the best. Yeah, it was retarded, but retarded equals crazy," Hurd said.

Ooohh I Think I Got One Now who can resist a face like this? Junior Jon Murphy participated in the Hershey Kiss search at this year's homecoming events. Jon was awarded first place for "kissing" up.

Can I Get a Drink Here? Chowing down in the Whopper® eating contest is freshman Bridgitt Lampert. "I was upset because my judge told me to stop when I wasn't finished, I screamed out 'CRAP'!! and everyone heard me," Lampert said.

Won More Time

The Class of 2002 are homecoming champs once again

Senior Float (lower right) Spinning out a first place for the third year in a row was the senior class.

Everybody PULL Tugging as a team doesn't have to be all work. "I could barely hold on to the rope any longer, Navin was grunting and our whole team couldn't stop laughing," junior Devin Thomas said. This junior team, partially consisting (from right to left) of Jeff Cox, Carrie Schroeder, Navin Srinivasan, Christine Schaum, Katie Murphy, and Devin Thomas showed just how fun this event can be. The juniors ended up third in this competition.

Picture Yourself As A Hollywood Star

As the red carpet rolled out, glitz and glamor filled the air on homecoming night.

I Bet My Face Looks Funnier Than Yours

Eating dinner at High Noon in Battle Creek are juniors Phil Weare and Seth Clark. "My food was horrible, but laughing a lot was my favorite part," Clark said.

My Baby Beside Me at the Wheel

Driving home from the dance is senior Megan Adams. "This year I went with my best friends and had a blast. I got a three dollar dress at a garage sale and decorated 'the beast.' It was awesome," Adams said.

When I was Your Age Visiting Marian Dellinger at Maplewood before the dance are seniors Sarah DeWolfe, Jacie DeWeese, and Karston Triebe. "The people there wanted to see us dressed up. It was a nice thing to do because they don't get out much," DeWeese said.

All This Dancing is Making Me Thirsty Picking up a drink at the refreshment table is freshman Clint Burghdorf. "The dance was everthing I thought it would be. The music was good and I enjoyed the group I went with," Burghdorf said.

You Make Me Feel Like Dancin' Hanging out at the dance are seniors Aubrey McCauley, Katie Rich (from Lakeview), and Elise Head. "I went with someone just as friends and focused on having a good time, not on proving myself to anyone," McCauley said.

Key to Harmony Trying to find the perfect keys to lead Little Bunny Fufu to a Battle of the Bands victory is junior Andrew Steele.

Here Steele plays the song "Baba o' Riley" by The Who. This song boosted Little Bunny Fufu to a first day lead and a chance to play for one more day.

Little Bunny Fufu eventually went down when L.P.D. took home the crown on the second day. "I expected to be nervous, but once we started playing, I just forgot about everything. I thought about the Rhinos and other zoo animals frolicking in the clouds. It soothed my nerves," Steele said.

The Man and the Music...

Does the man make the music, or does the music make the man?

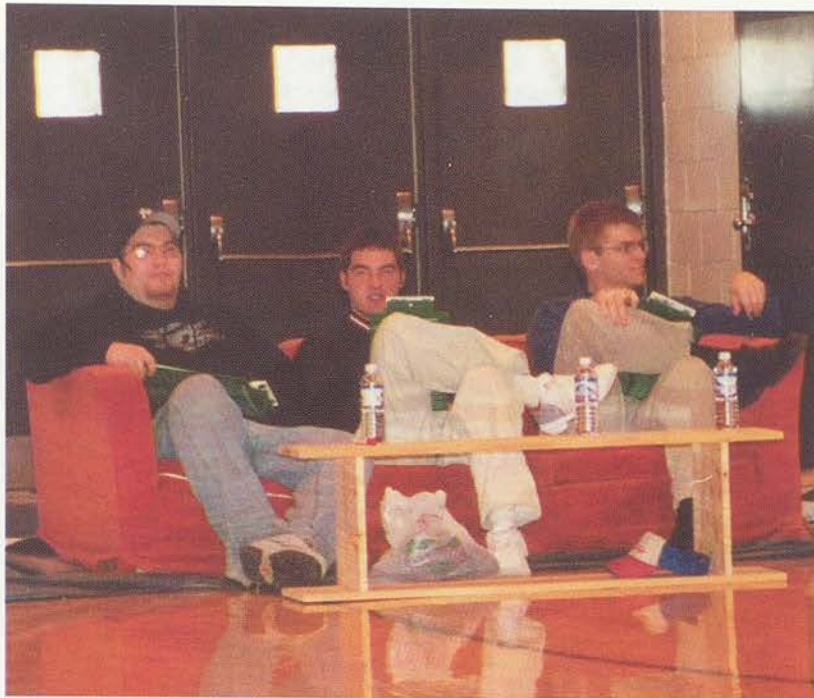

The stage was set. The teachers and students filled the gym as the judges were preparing to make or break the musicians' hearts. In the middle of all of the pandemonium were five of Marshall's bands. They included Happy Dragon, Podreira, Little Bunny Fufu, Resin, and L.P.D. The battle was an event that stretched over two days of seminar time. Each band came out on the opening day and performed two cover songs of their choices.

"Playing in front of all of those students was an adrenaline rush, and it was cool," sophomore Ryan Hastings said. The judges had to choose the winner on the first day. Their choice was Little Bunny Fufu. The band joining them in the finals was L.P.D. On the last day, Dan Boyer arrived with his dog. This was the first of two surprise moves. Out of nowhere came a figure covered with a black sheet. It was a 2001 Marshall High graduate, Scott McLain. "When Scott came out, he was the crowd's favorite, and that propelled L.P.D. to a last-day victory over Little Bunny Fufu," sophomore Erik Heirman said. "Battle of the Bands was a lot of fun, and I hope that it continues on for years," freshman Kipp Caron said.

And the Winner is... Deciding who would play another day, the judges Big Joe Scalf, Ian Schnaitman, and David Larzelere sit on the senior's grunge couch to listen to the bands. After the first day, the judges chose L.P.D. and Little Bunny Fufu to move on. "Everyone did a great job, and that made our decision a tough one," Ian Schnaitman said.

The Hair That Makes the Man With his hair swinging all over the place and his band playing behind him, sophomore Ryan Hastings leaves his trademark on the Battle of the Bands. "My hair is my trademark. If I had short hair, no one would know me," Hastings said.

Boom Baby In the back keeping the beat for the freshman band Happy Dragon is drummer John Driscoll. "I was just trying not to screw up, because all I could think about was not looking or not sounding as dumb as Matt Sherrill, our lead-singer did," Driscoll said.

Suck My Kiss! Singing some Red Hot Chili Peppers in front of the whole school is freshman Matt Sherrill. "I was just giving it my all. I didn't want to have any regrets when I woke up the next day," Sherrill said.

Spirit Transformed

School pride

Every so often, a change comes along that creates a brand new identity. One of these changes is the addition of competitive cheerleading at Marshall High School. For many years, cheerleading has been kept on the sidelines of football and basketball games. However, this year competitive cheerleading takes the center court when they perform.

Competitive cheerleading is not a new idea, however. There have been several other schools in the area that have had it. "Other schools have had competitive cheerleading for many previous years such as Sturgis, Portage Northern, Portage Central, Loy Norrix, Colon, Dowagiac, and Plainwell," junior co-captain Abby Lake said. "Even though we were the new girls, I think we held our own. I can't wait until next year when we come back and show them how much we've improved."

Everyday Life While in the middle of round three, sophomore Jessi Broyles makes a landing coming down from a flip off of sophomore Sarah South's shoulders. "This is pretty much how we look all the time, our skirts are flying around in our faces. That's everyday life for us here," Broyles said.

Stop Drop and Roll During warm up for round three, sophomore Emily Mills looks upon her teammate, junior Carrie Jones. "We don't get a lot of time to practice, so it makes it a little harder to compete," Mills said.

What Are We Doing?!! The Competitive Cheer Team lines up before every competition to say the Star Spangled Banner, if they can remember it that is. "I couldn't remember the words, I... I just don't know," junior co-captain Devin Thomas said.

They Make It Look Easy As round two participants do the splits, one of their five required skills, they smile for the judges. "Round two is our 'skills' round. It's one of my favorite rounds because I rule at the skills and stunting rounds," sophomore Becky Woods said.

A-W-E-S-O-M-E!!! While sitting and waiting to hear their scores, junior Carrie Schroeder starts a cheer. "We have a cheer that says 'Awesome' whenever another school gets their awards," Schroeder said.

Playing Switcharoo

Students trade cultures for one school year to strengthen their sense of self.

Try to imagine this: Leave your family for one school year to go to another country. You don't know anyone. You could have problems communicating with people. Their customs are very different from what you are used to. Those might be some problems if you look at the negative side of things. On the positive side, you have the chance to make new friendships, and you get to learn a lot of new knowledge.

"[Some of the highlights are] to learn English and a different culture. I get to spend time with friends. I came here, and I met a lot of exchange students, and it allowed me to learn about other cultures," Yuka Kitamura, a Japanese exchange student, said.

"[The best part of being an exchange student is] learning about a different culture, know different people. I came here not knowing anybody or anything. Everything you do here is by yourself. Its hard to be without my family. I just did because I like to learn about how different cultures live. I did it for the experience," Alejandra Martinez said.

"Seeing the difference between people around you and knowing yourself better [is the best thing about being an exchange student]. I will miss Taco Bell the most when I leave because they don't have that much Mexican food in Russia," Natalia Alabusheva said.

Don't Wanna Miss A Thing Gathering at upstairs four corners for a group photo are all of the exchange students, including Vanessa Rodgers and Patrick Dyer. "I will miss my friends and the double-fudge brownie ice cream because I won't have them for a long time, and there's no double-fudge ice cream in Germany," Karsten Triebe said.

It's a Tourist Thing In Valencia, Spain, at the Plaza Virgin, senior Vanessa Rodgers feeds the birds. "It's really popular to do there. Not among teenagers, but as a tourist thing," Rodgers said.

Don't Worry, Be Happy "I was in Natalia's grandmother's back yard. I was having fun because the weather was good, and I was on the boat. People were talking, and I was enjoying it," Pei Liu, a Chinese exchange student, said.

Whistle While You Work Over at his host family's house making a treat is senior Patrick Dyer. "We were making gyoza because my family ate that every Thursday. That's my best friend Ippei. I missed being so far removed from the culture I was born into," Dyer said.

Come On In, The Water is Fine Over by Goguac lake on the dock are exchange students Natalia Alabusheva from Russia and Kaisa Kuosmanen from Finland. "We were in Battle Creek at Natalia's host grandparent's house to go tubing. We were getting ready to go out in the boat. I had a great time," Kuosmanen said.

Just Bust a Move Doing their thing on the dance floor are juniors Erin Slone, Susan Lambrix, Thomas Stefan, Hope Garza and Katie Wheat. "I love to dance," Lambrix said.

Tango Junior Ken Sink shows his date his best tango dance. "I was just showing my date what I could do; showing her my studly moves," Sink said.

And the King and Queen Are... Being crowned King and Queen are seniors Billy Romano and Yuka Kitamura. "I was so shocked," Kitamura said.

Come Here, Big Boy Newcomers to the dancing scene are freshmen Hearther Baird and Will Newton. "For my second dance, it was fun. Will knows how to dance," Baird said.

Where?Where? Looking about are Sophomore Jenny Johnston and her date, graduate Aaron Wendt. "We were just looking to see what people were wearing, and I was hoping no one had my dress," Johnston said.

What's So Funny? Blurting out a laugh is freshman Kara Evans. Stunned by the area of her mouth opening are freshmen Erin Richards and Darin DeWeese. "I don't remember what exactly I was laughing at, but I bet it was funny," Evans said. "I didn't even know her mouth could open that big," DeWeese said.

Becoming One With the Music

From the soul of your heart to the soles of your feet.

The winter atmosphere this year at the winter dance was filled with igloos, ice caps, and snow flakes floating near. "I think they were the best decorations I've seen at a dance yet. That might just be because I helped with them, but really they were impressing. The igloo and snow flakes... I would say we did an awesome job," sophomore Maddie Metzger said.

This was also the first year a contest for Snow Queen and Snow King was held. The Snow Queen was Yuka Kitamura with her Snow King Billy Romano by her side. Also was an attendant and escort from each class. The freshmen attendant and escort were Tiffany Silvers and Eddie Sleeper. Sophomore brother and sister duo Jon and Stella Tippen took escort and attendant. Junior attendant and escort were Amber Huffman and Keith Carver. Senior escort and attendant were Sarah Dominique and Seth Presley. Snow Queen Kitamura is an exchange student from Japan and was shocked to receive such a honor. "I was so nervous because I wasn't sure I could be Queen. When I won, I said, 'Yeah I'm first exchange student to be Queen, that's amazing'," Kitamura said. Romano was also excited to receive the award. "It was a great feeling to know that even the average Joe can become King," Romano said.

Thank Goodness for Quick Dry Desperately trying to paint her toenails is senior Megan Adams. "I was running so late, and Billy Romano said that I couldn't get into his car unless my toenails were painted," Adams said.

Dancing Queen Breaking it down on the dance floor is senior Billy Romano. "I saw all of the girls dancing diva-style, so I thought, 'Hey, I'm cute. I can be a diva too,'" Romano said.

Mardi Gras Queen Being crowned senior prom queen is Sarah Dominique. "I was nervous about the vote, but I had a great night and I thought the theme was very fun," Dominique said.

Double the Fun Giving a new meaning to line dancing are senior Sara Cazarez, sophomore Shane Rice, and senior Megan Cazarez. "I was just busting a move with two awesome girls because that's what I like to do," Rice said.

My Guardian Angel Trying not to stick her date is sophomore Erin Skidmore. "Nick's mom showed me how to put on his boutonniere, and I did it all by myself... I was proud of the results," Skidmore said.

Masked Behavior

With the mystery of Mardi Gras comes the chance to show the real faces behind the masks.

Through the Battle Creek Federal Center doors, sparkling beads, festive masks, and bright lights fill the air. Passing through the metal detector and up the tube-lit staircase, couples proceed into the ballroom. "The theme and decorations were sweet, and I thought it was one of our best dances," senior Jared Palmer said. With all the nervousness, excitement and the other emotions that came along with prom, students were able to let loose and have good, safe fun.

"By the end of the night I was really able to relax and go wild," senior Steven Albaugh said.

Students danced the night away in the dim-lit ballroom to music spun by Mark Paskett. "They played a wide variety of music, a little something for everyone," senior Claire Nichols said. As the night went on, Mardi Gras Prom King Josh Petty and Queen Sarah Dominique shared a dance with the rest of the court. The evening drew to a close at midnight as students poured out the ballroom doors.

Royalty At Its Best Accepting their positions as Prom Prince and Princess are juniors Jon Murphy and Jamie Morrison. "I was proud to carry on the Carl winning tradition," Murphy said.

Do the Locomotion Getting their groove on are seniors Ashley Miller and Ritsuko Kondo. "Dancing is always fun for me, especially when I'm with fun people," Miller said.

World War III "At this moment there was some major high school drama playing itself out through a break-up," junior Tom Stefan said. "This was truly the most interesting thing of the night," junior Susan Lambrix said.

Kiss Me You Fool Receiving a kiss from her date, junior Phillip Weare, is junior Ingrid Edwards. "I was nervous about it being my first prom and everything was so last minute, but the whole night rocked my face off," Edwards said.

Gettin' Jiggy Wit' It Busting a move on the dance floor is sophomore Jessi Broyles and senior Aaron Ebner. "I prepared myself for prom by watching 'The Grind' and 'Cancun' specials on MTV," Broyles said.

My Fair Lady Smiling at her date, '01 graduate Jeff Tarkeiwicz, is junior Brittney Byrens. "I really enjoyed the evening. It was fun to see everyone dressed up and having fun," Byrens said.

Just Call Me Angel Donning white feathered wings, Danaé Huggett plays Never is a Promise by Fiona Apple, while her cousin Kara Scears sings. "I don't know where the idea of us being angels came from, but I thought it was cute," Huggett said.

Staring At The Sun Standing all alone in the spotlight is Shay Caron. He sang two songs, the first being Crawling in the Dark by Hoobastank, and the second being Staring at the Sun by Offspring. "I was a lot less nervous than I thought I would be. Once I got out there, I hardly thought about how many people were watching," Caron said

When You're A Shamrock Re-enacting the West Side Story of Marshall's elementary schools are Jeff Hammer, Jenny Stulberg, Ryan Trapp, Ian Stewart, and Matt VanDerMuelen. "It was a really fun skit to be in, and I'm proud of how it turned out," Stewart said.

Here I Come To Save The Day Doing his best Mighty Mouse impression is Billy Ramano. "I did that skit because chicks dig me a lot more when I'm flying around in a tight Speedo and spandex," Ramano said.

SUUUUEEEEEEY! Ryan "Mar-Lee Muscles" Meeder gives ol' Lance "Benny Armstrong" McCreary a little trim. "It was darn tootin' fun for me to shave Lance's head. Sure was," Meeder said.

Now It's Over

This is how our senior year will end.

Every year for twenty-five years now, seniors celebrate the end of their year by putting on a show for family, friends, and anyone else who can get tickets. The show is a conglomeration of songs, dances, and comic skits. This year was no different, as the class of 2002 joined together once again to perform their Class Night in front of a packed theater. Although the audience only witnesses a show that is around three and a half hours, there are countless hours of preparation that the seniors put into it. "When we started auditions, it seemed like it was way too early. But then before you know it, you're up in front of the crowd on the actual night," Seth Presley said. "It all goes by so fast." Despite the many hours of rehearsals, when the show is performed live anything can happen. "Actually performing it in front of the audience threw me off. I wasn't expecting that they would laugh so much," Beth Scherer said.

I'm Here to Dance Austin Lortz shows the crowd that although he plays Marshall football, his true love lies in the art of dance. "Just call me Lortz of the Dance," Lortz said.

Detroit, WHAT?! Jon Ziskal sits in "Mr. Dent's Spanish class." Ziskal is playing the role of a thug, who represents the D-Town whenever Matt "Mr. Dent" VanDerMeulen talks about his hometown. "I was just representin' yo!," Ziskal said.

Amazing Grace Performing the ever-popular song Amazing Grace is Collin Vincent. Vincent's performance stunned the audience. "Walking out in front of all those people made me forget the words, but once I got started it just came to me," Vincent said.

The Ballaz Holding back his homey Aaron "Bizzo" Ebner, is Tyler "Tickleliscious" Candelaria. "I was just like word to tha, word to tha," Candelaria said.

CrossingOver Impersonating John Edwards of the TV show Crossing Over is Jared Palmer. Palmer "sensed" the participants' past. "No, seriously this guy is not for real, but I am," Palmer said.

Oh, Crap! Holding it all in while Jon Ziskal and Greg Wicklund use the restroom, is David Palchak. Palchak had eaten a burrito, and was causing quite a stink in the bathroom. "The inspiration came straight from the infamous back stall of our high school bathroom," Palchak said.

Making Dad Proud Stepping up to receive her diploma from her dad Kevin McCauley is Aubrey McCauley. "It really meant a lot to me that my dad was the one to give me my diploma," McCauley said.

Wear Sunscreen Teaching his classmates a few of life's little lessons is Dave Palchak. "I was so nervous, but I felt honored that my classmates picked me to speak to them for something so important," Palchak said.

Hi, Mom! Flashing their pearly whites to the crowds in downtown Marshall are Megan Adams and Nick Zalweski. "I was so pumped that graduation was here. Now I can finally be considered a 'young adult'," Adams said.

Bye Bye Bye... Taking one last look at the crowd are Jenna Hurd, Brittany Hainline, and Steven Hyland. "I can't believe it's over; we're finally free," Hurd said.

Your Time to Shine Calling his fellow classmates one by one is Ian Stewart. "I practiced everyone's name...day and night. Yep, I was proud of myself, by the way... CARL FOREVER," Stewart said.

Saying Goodbye to Yesterday

Together for one last time, the class of 2002 bid a final farewell.

As well as saying goodbye to their friends and teachers, seniors of 2002 say their last goodbye to being known as the Marshall Redskins. Class speakers Jon Ziskal and Dave Palchak spread their words of wisdom about keeping comfort zones and looking back in 25 years, showing that anything is possible in the not so far future.

"It's going to be really different being known as any other mascot. Yet, even in 25 years, we'll always be known as the Redskins of 2002," Ryan McCann said. "Even though the identity issue may seem like a big deal now, it pretty much is only a fraction of the importance of identity in the real world. This just helps us prepare for changes in our future," Lauren Arizmendi said.

In the end, the class of 2002 will always be remembered not just because of the mascot issue, but for all the stories they have brought to the history of the high school.

High Rollers After losing almost all of her chips on the "Razzle Dazzle" game, Brittany Hainline lets out a scream to relieve herself of some bottled up anger. Mike Kiewiet and Amy Eaton, on the other hand, look like they're taking home the loot. "I was hoping that it would be the roll where I would finally win some chips back," Hainline said.

Hey, This is Actually Interesting After all the reading Kara Byrne has done over the years she has finally found a book that keeps her interested and even makes her chuckle. "Curious George is the best book in the world," Byrne said.

Hey, Hot Lady All dolled up for a night with his favorite Mar-Lee boys is Tyler Candelaria. "Class Night was off the hizzook. My favorite part was being dressed like a woman," Candelaria said.

Break It Down For Us Bustin' a move on the dance floor are Shannon Duffey and Megan Casarez. "It was our last prom ever, you better believe I was workin' that dance floor," Duffey said.

Free Food Taking advantage of the free food provided at the senior party is Jessica Oswald. "Mmmmm... food makes me happy; and when I'm happy, everyone is happy. That's because I'm Everybody's Buddy," Oswald said.

Hold On Tight Swinging her way through the obstacle course, making sure not to touch the ground and ruin the ride, is Vanessa Rodgers. "There were two ways to cross that part. You could crawl, or you could glide. As you can see, I chose to glide," Rodgers said.

Full Speed Ahead Pushing his strength to the limits on the "Bungee Run" is Curtis Pennington. This activity caught the attention of many at the senior party and gave for some fun competition with its dual-side runways. "It turned out to be a lot harder than it looked. In fact, it almost knocked the wind out of me," Pennington said.

No! It's Not Your Turn, Cricket! Attempting mouth-to-mouth resuscitation on their "dying crickets" are Nate Powers, Ryan McCann, Kelsey Schnaitman, Katie Lange, Bill Romano, Justin Allmond, Merry Lazar, Cindy Moore, Amber Goodrich, Ashley Sobel, Brittany Hainline, and Katie Howard. The hypnotist had them believing that they had almost killed a cricket, but that they could bring it back to life. "It was a strange feeling, because you could tell what was going on, but you had no control over it," McCann said.

Come On! Big Money! Playing a high-concentration game of Black Jack are Tyler LaFountain, Jordan Feldpausch, and Steve Hyland. "The game was getting way too intense for me to handle. The sweat was just dripping off my face in anticipation," Feldpausch said.

Officer Quilhot Testing out his marksmanship on the arcade game is Brian Quilhot. "I ended up doing better than I thought I would. Who knows? Maybe I could have a career as a police officer," Quilhot said.

 Taking over the tour bus is junior Jon Murphy. "I kicked the tour guide off because I knew more than he did. Besides, I had the sweater over the shoulders, stroking the chin, smart guy thing going on," Murphy said.

Three Carls In An Airport
 Rhyming as he waits to board his plane is junior Justin Vanderberg. "One stood up and bumped his head. Mama called the doctor and the doctor said CARL," Vanderberg said. Looking on are junior Cam Miller and his parents Penny and Terry 'Yanni' Miller, and junior Jon Murphy.

G.I. Kids: Investigating D.C. Close Up

The Close-Up program is a chance for juniors interested in law, government, politics, and other similar subjects to get a good look at the heart of our nation's government. The trip to Washington, D.C., gives students an inside look to help them better understand how the government runs and it prepares them for their futures. "Close-Up was a good experience for me because I would like to go into politics," junior Susan Lambrix said. In the busy Close-Up week, students have chances to participate in many activities. Students can attend seminars, sight-see, and also have a free day. "In some seminars we talked to a lot of insiders from the government. We also talked to a pacifist," junior Ashley Hill said. Students close the week out with a dance. This inside look teaches a lot about the many ways our government functions. "I lost a lot of respect for our military after going to that seminar," junior Cam Miller said. Other students had different opinions. "I respect our government more now after seeing the process," Lambrix said. With these new outlooks and understandings of the U.S. government, students are better prepared to form their own political opinions as they reach voting age.

Hit the Snooze Getting their schedules for the next day with Ms. Annette Zuehlke are juniors Susan Lambrix and Katie Wheat. "It was really important to pay attention at these meetings so you knew what was going on the next day. As you can see, I had no idea where to go the next day," Wheat said.

Please Step Away From the... Sitting on the John Adams statue at the Supreme Court building are juniors Katie Murphy, Devin Thomas, and Crista Chapman. "The security guards ran over and yelled at us to get off the memorial right after the picture," Chapman said.

Out On the Town Visiting the Okinawa Memorial are juniors Liz Foerster and Abby Lake. "I really liked Close-Up. It was different than I expected, and seeing the monuments was interesting," Foerster said.

"O Brother Montague, Give Me Thy Hand" Making peace after the deaths of Romeo and Juliet are seniors Jared Palmer and Shay Caron. Looking on are the townspeople of Verona. "I had a great time interacting with everyone, and I made friends with people I never knew before," Caron said.

"I Am Aweary, Give Me Leave A while" Offering words of advice to Juliet is senior Kari "Nurse" Hamaker. "I loved playing the nurse. It's a great role, hard to get into, but it finally came out for me the last week of practice," Hamaker said.

"My Lips, Two Blushing Pilgrims" Kissing his on-stage lover is junior Jon "Romeo" Murphy. "It wasn't hard to get into character during practice, but during performance I saw my friends, and it broke me inside. It was hard to stay focused," Murphy said.

"Poison, I See, Hath Been His Timeless End"
 Discovering her Romeo has died is junior Devin "Juliet" Thomas. "I didn't expect the role of Juliet, especially with my schedule, but I had a blast doing it," Thomas said.

Loathed Enemies Stuck in a Web of Love and Tragedy

"Two households, both alike in dignity, in fair Verona where we lay our scene..." A production close to text with a few minor alterations--modernized costumes, heavy metal music, and lighting effects--helped to enhance the present day setting of the Shakespearean drama, Romeo and Juliet. With this description, one may think of Baz Luhrmen's remake of Shakespeare's original text, starring Leonardo DeCaprio and Claire Danes. Though Baz Luhrmen didn't direct this production, juniors Jon Murphy and Devin Thomas played the title roles of the two star-crossed lovers.

"My favorite thing about modernizing the production was that it wasn't really modernized. It didn't take place in just one time period. We combined things like swords and clothing from different time periods," Murphy said.

"I enjoyed it modernized. I liked the idea of using present day music, but I thought we could've expanded on that more," Thomas said.

Whether it be the 1700s, the 90s, or the year 2002, Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet tragic tale rings true.

Reaching New Heights

Soaring through the air is junior Danny McConnell. "Jumping is my favorite part of skiing. I like to see how much higher I can get each time," McConnell said.

Is This the Bunny Hill?

Struggling to stay balanced on the icy slope is junior Justin Vanderberg. "The key to skiing well is good coordination," Vanderberg said.

Whether its skis or snowboards

Ski Club members are leaving their tracks.

Do you know the thrill of flying down a hill at mounting speeds? What about the fear of getting caught on a moving lift? Or the disappointment of yet another canceled trip to the slopes? Nearly 90 ski club students pile into a bus to Bittersweet Ski Resort in Kalamazoo every possible Wednesday to brave the elements and the laws of gravity.

The weekly trip to the slopes gives many members a chance to rise to new challenges. "I hope to complete a double back flip by the end of the ski season," sophomore Tyler Peters said. For others, it's time to learn the basics. "Currently, I'm working on staying on my feet for more than five seconds," junior Elyse Cornwell said.

Despite the work on their moves, members still have plenty of time for a good laugh. "One time I was snowboarding and got hit in the face with a snowball that was three times the size of a softball and full of ice. I almost cried because it hurt so bad and everyone was laughing at me. But then some girls stopped to help me up, so it wasn't a bad evening," sophomore Jeremy Pierce said.

Whether on the slopes to master a new skill or just to have fun, these snow bunnies are leaving tracks.

Just in Time After taking a spill, junior Liz Foerster stops to catch her breath. "I nearly slammed into the ski lift that time!" Foerster said.

Right on Track

"Ski Club is yummy," junior Keith Carver said easing down the hill. "If it was a giant apple, I would dip it in caramel and name it Carl."

Concentration "Keith and I were about ready to race so this was an intense moment for me," junior Andrew Steele said, preparing himself for the downhill duel.

Ghetto Supa Ballaz Fighting for the ball are freshman Ashley Goodrich of the Shot Callaz and senior Sarah Casarez of the Belle Mafia. "I couldn't decide whether to pull down my shirt or get the ball. I pulled my shirt down, and Ashley got it," Casarez said.

Oh, MyEyes Blinded by the quick passing of a bare midriff are seniors Daniel Lee Boyer and Tyler Candelaria. "I like it when Justin runs by," Boyer said.

Get 'Im Boys Sicking Team Carl on senior Andy Dillion are juniors Jon Murphy and Josh Damron. "When you are attacked by Carl, bad things happen. We all know who ended up with the ball in this scene," Damron said.

The Best of the Worst

For those students who didn't quite make it into varsity basketball or volleyball, the school has set up an intramurals program. "Well, of course, I could have been the all-star of the varsity team, but I feel my talent is better used on the intramural court," freshman Jake Simmons said. Much of the untapped talent of the school may come out in these games. Students of all grades engage in friendly competition with their fellow schoolmates. "We will squash everyone. Squash, squash like bugs under my shoe," senior Merry Lazar said.

Intramurals are a chance for all students to learn good sportsmanship skills. Intramurals are a chance to bring out the athlete in all participants. "Intramurals make me feel good about myself. I like to be able to participate in a school athletics without all the pressures and practices of varsity sports," senior Steve Albaugh said. "Sometimes intramurals get a bad name as the special ed athletics of the high school," sophomore Jeremy Pierce said. However, many lessons can be learned on the intramural court about concepts such as teamwork, sportsmanship, and hard work.

Look at All the Pretty... Amazed by the sight of girls in volleyball shorts are seniors Collin Vincent and Matt Bailey of The Broccoli's. "With my sleeves on my head and not on my shirt, it is possible for the girls to check out my arms," Vincent said.

Roaw Hiss Roaw Ganging up on sophomore Meghan Davenport are seniors Elise Head and Megan Casarez as seniors Jenny Stulberg and Jenna Hurd look on. "We had a lot of fights in the girls' games this year. It really wasn't basketball, just one big cat fight," Head said.

Improving Life for Their Successors

Student Council works hard, and everyone reaps the benefits.

Every year, the students in this school elect representatives from their peers for the Student Council. This organization gathers occasionally to discuss their main goal: to improve the school. "We want to increase the community's involvement in matters and just lighten up the atmosphere," senior and council president Ian Stewart said.

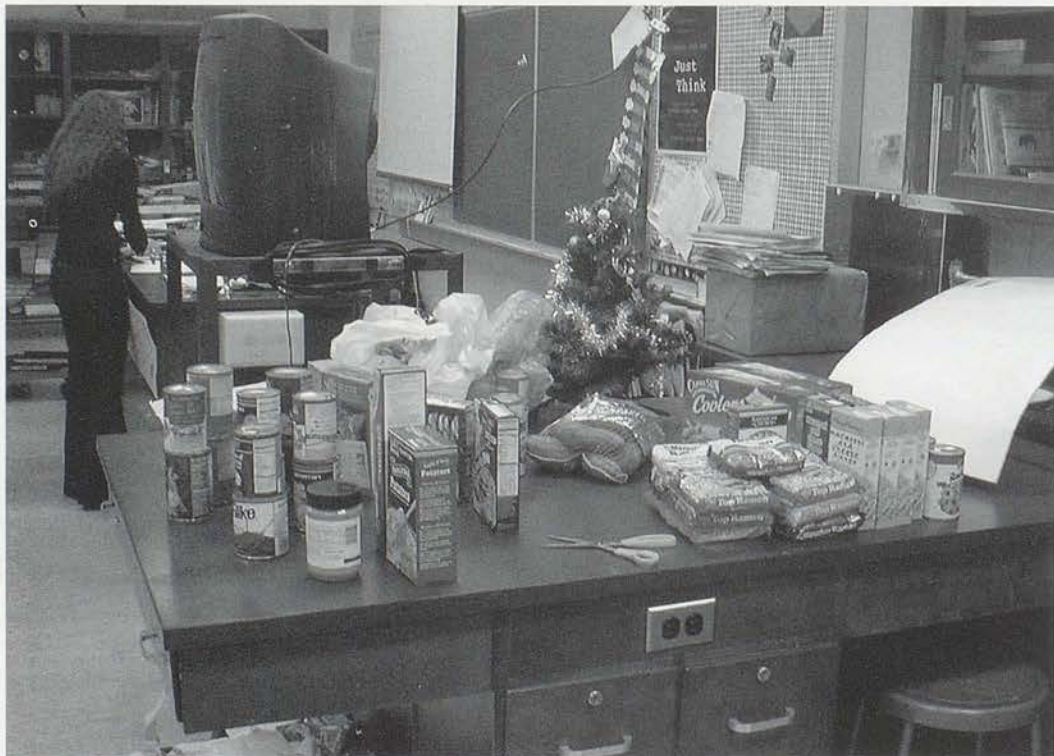

The student council addresses many tasks over the course of one meeting, such as improving the school's recycling program, arranging pep assemblies, and even building a patio for outside lunch. This year the council has had one very important task: they must help to decide the name of the new mascot. Student Council has split apart into several committees, and together they have been gathering input from students and adults alike. "I would have been angry if they [the school board] had taken it out of our hands, but it's great that we have a say," sophomore Ali Wills said.

Guiding Light The teacher who is in charge of the council is Brian Burns, who here looks at some of the council's work. "He'll tell us what we can and can't do, and he'll be our contact.... He gives us a lot of freedom," sophomore Beau Hutchings said.

Charity Effort A sample of the food Student Council collected over several weeks sits on a classroom counter. "I think everyone gave as much as they could, and that gave me a good feeling," Hutchings said.

Order, Order! Opening another meeting is senior Ian Stewart. "Our goal is to make the school experience more enjoyable," Stewart said.

And the Survey Says Looking through student suggestions for new nicknames are junior Amber Huffman and sophomore Ali Wills. "I'm on the Public Relations committee. We're basically the bridge between the public and the school," Wills said.

We Appreciate... Writing a letter thanking everyone who wrote in about the Redskin issue is freshman Lindsey Merkel. "It's good to know that I'm helping the school with a controversial issue," Merkel said.

Time to Begin Lighting his candle at the induction ceremony is senior Justin Allmond. "I felt honored to be a part of this. I also liked that they made the ceremony more formal," Allmond said.

Listen Up Listening to instructions at a meeting about an upcoming garage sale are seniors Megan Gilman and Brenda Hillman. "NHS is a good experience because it's a honor to be chosen, and I have never been in it before," Hillman said. "NHS is always fun and interesting, because we are learning about teamwork and assisting people," Gilman said.

Papers and Grades "As I was correcting some papers, I thought back to the grades I had to have when I was a junior in order to be eligible as a NHS member. I am glad that I kept my grades up, because if I didn't, I would have missed out on a lot," senior Sarah Dominique said.

Character, Service, Leadership, and Scholarship

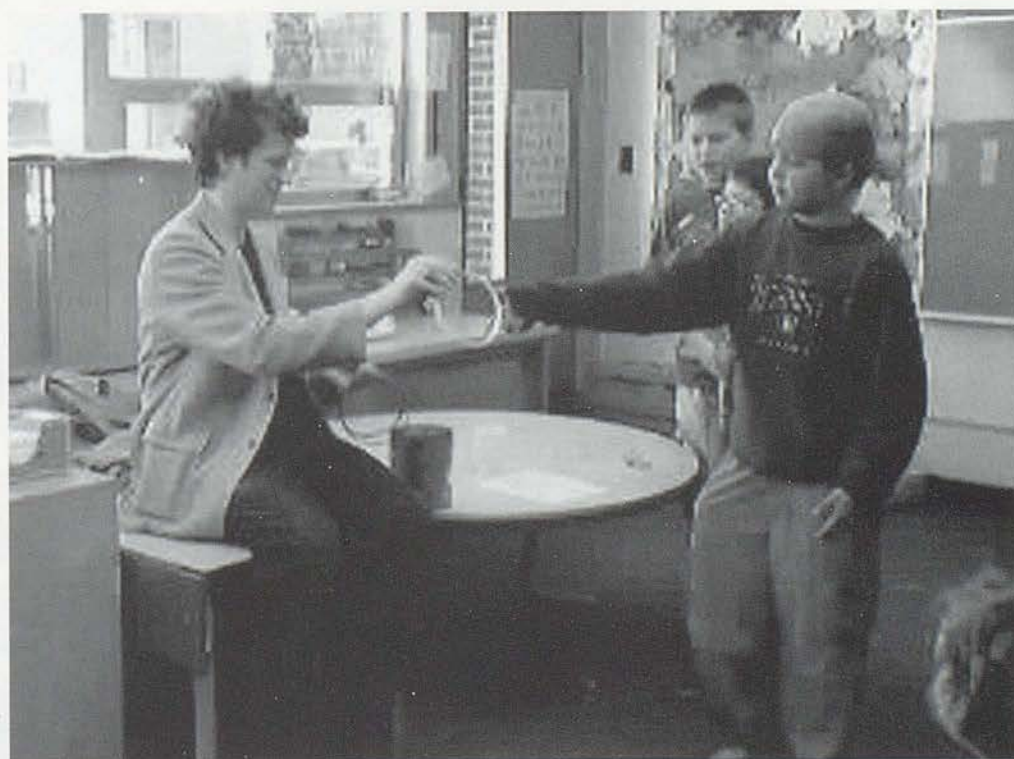

As spring comes near junior students wait to hear if they have been accepted into the National Honor society. The selection process is stringent as members must exhibit certain qualities. "The four things we look at to select our members are scholarship, leadership, character, and service," NHS Advisor Tracy Haroff said. "It's nice that they felt highly enough of me to let me in," senior Shay Caron said. "I am proud because not only do you have to be in good academic standing, but you also have to have good character and community service," senior Brittany Hainline said.

This year's members were required to do ten hours of community service. Next year they will be required to do even more. "I like that they require community service because it's a worthwhile project," Caron said. The members are also required to do two group projects a year. One was working the Sherman carnival. "I enjoyed it because I got to work with the kids. I was also glad that I was able to help my community," senior Jonas Heirman said. The other project was working a garage sale to raise money for the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation.

With honor comes responsibility and commitment to the community.

Meeting Time Running a meeting for an upcoming garage sale are seniors Greg Wicklund and Josh Petty. "We are officers and so we have to run the meetings. I am comfortable with talking in front of my fellow classmates because I don't mind talking in front of people," Petty said.

Toss That Ring At the Sherman Carnival senior Ethan Gordon is at one of the two group projects for NHS. He was assigned to two hours of working games. "It was fun because the same kids kept coming back, and I was able to talk to them more. I also got to leave early because the ring toss ran out of pop (which was the prize)," Gordon said.

Spreading the Help

YAC students get involved by going out and helping kids.

If you ask most students, they don't know what the YAC is all about. But YAC (Youth Advisory Council) does a lot of activities with the money they grant and the time and energy they use. Before they can begin to grant money, they must submit an application to join the YAC. The current members meet to decide who will be in. When they are chosen, they begin their efforts to support the youth of Marshall. In the fall, a group of YACers go down to the elementary schools in costumes to read and act out Dr. Seuss' The Sneetches. Also, during Christmas time their big project is Adopt-a-Family. The YACers form committees, each one in charge of food, gifts or the cookies that they make. "YAC is all about helping the kids of Marshall not only by sending money, but by going out and helping them," president Alison Jenks said. While the YAC is big on helping out in person, grants are the main source that helps the kids. "It's fun to help make decisions that help make a better future for generations to come," junior Steve Weaver said. So, what is the YAC about? Spreading the help...

This Is Fun Stuff...Listening intently to the speaker, freshman Adam Jenks laughs to himself, "It's really fun to watch the kids because they really enjoy it when we come to the class," Jenks said. Also listening were juniors Brittany Byrens and Allison Jenks, seniors Megan Adams and Ryan McCann, and sophomore Laura Davis.

Aww... How Sweet Reading to Mr. Dorosh's class is senior Sarah DeWolf. "I was reading to the class, and I had a really good time because the kids were really sweet," DeWolf said.

This Is The Best Ever Listening to freshman Adam Jenks read is junior Brittany Byrens. "I thought it was really fun to read the books with the kids because they got to see the book right in front of them," Byrens said.

Raise 'Em Up High Voting on a grant are juniors Steve Weaver, Danielle Post, Brittany Byrens, and freshman Kara Evans. "I like to grant money because it helps all the kids, even the little ones," Post said.

This Is So Hard... Trying to wrap a present for the Adopt-a-Family is sophomore Emily Boedecker and junior Allison Jenks. "I'm not very good at wrapping presents, but for some reason they let me do it," Boedecker said.

Follow This Pen A policeman administers a drunk-driving eye test to junior Devin Thomas, who played the drunk driver in the mock crash. "I was really nervous that I wouldn't fail the eye test, and I wouldn't seem drunk," Thomas said.

Emergency Medical Procedures A stretcher is laid out for senior Sarah Dominique, one student who participated in the crash. "We wanted to get across the message that it really does happen," Dominique said.

NeedsMoreBruising The hand of teacher Ms. Ralston applies bruise makeup to senior Sarah Dominique's shoulder. "The makeup effect is to give a sense of reality if it's done well, and that was our goal," Ralston said.

This Could Happen To You!

The student organization SADD fights drunk driving, but that is not their only priority. "[SADD] actually stands for Students Against Destructive Decisions. It goes beyond drunk driving," advisor Ms. Pahl said. Nevertheless, the primary goal of SADD is to reduce (even eliminate, if possible) drunk driving among students. "It's a good cause, and I've just stuck with it," junior and SADD president Thomas Stefan said.

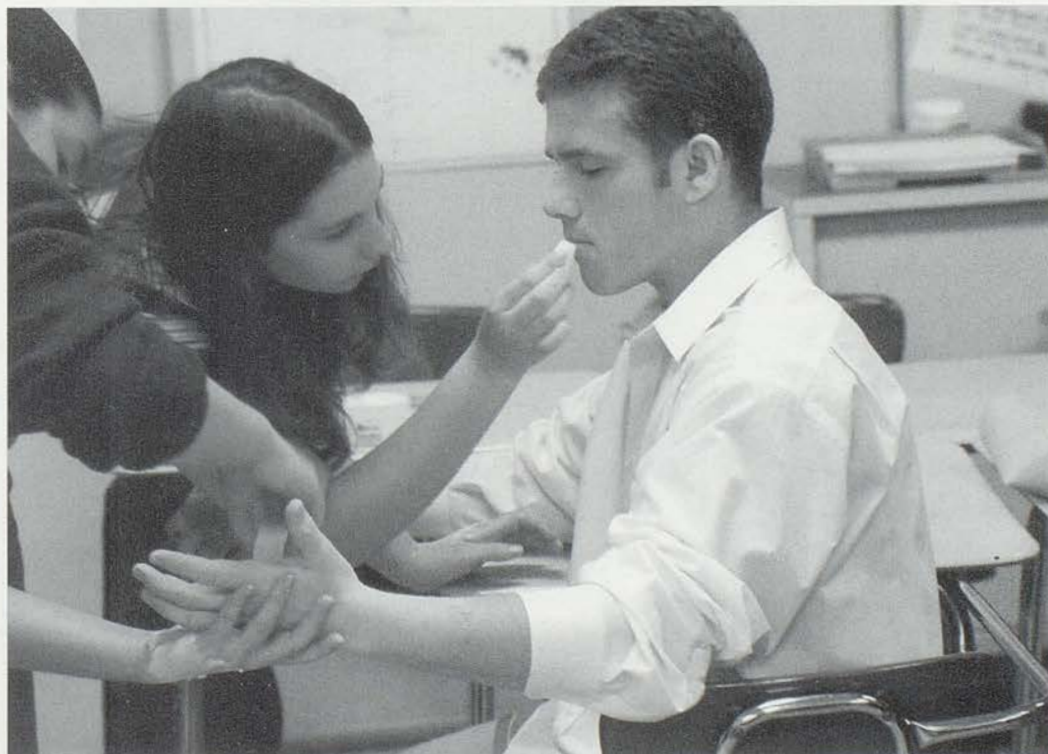

SADD organizes events and fundraisers throughout the whole year, but their efforts are focused around the school's prominent events: homecoming, prom and graduation. One event put on during prom week was a mock car crash, involving wrecked cars, students made up with fake blood, and even a helicopter. "It lets students see what can happen to them or their friends because of impaired thinking," Stefan said. The students and teachers who participate in SADD devote much of their free time to helping everyone at the school make wise decisions. "I really think we're reaching students, especially around prom week. Hopefully they're giving [drunk driving] a second thought," Ms. Pahl said.

Jaws of Life Firemen cut off and peel away one car's ceiling so that senior Jared Palmer can be freed. "It was a really creepy feeling. I never want to be in that position," Palmer said.

I'm Not Quite Dead Yet... With sponges in hand, sophomore Jenny Wright and freshman Tiffany Maddux whiten the skin of "dead" senior Kail Robinson. "It's something to think about. [Death] isn't something you think about every day," Robinson said.

Hearing Aides

Helping their peers one ear at a time.

"Though some people say peer listeners don't do anything, our impact is really below the surface," senior Ryan Trapp said. Ryan, along with the other 23 listeners, talk to those students who feel they have nowhere to turn. "People can come to us if they don't want their problems to become tomorrow's gossip," junior Elyse Cornwell said.

Peer listeners must undergo some serious training at the beginning of the school year to prepare them for the job. "We have really had a hard time this year because the organization that used to fund us shut down," senior Jon Ziskal said.

Not only are peer listeners grateful for the chance to help others but also for the chance to grow themselves. "I believe being a part of this group has given me a chance to improve my listening skills. It has taught me that I don't have to talk all the time," Ziskal said. Through the trials and tribulations of high school, peer listeners are there to lend an ear to any student in need. "I guess you could say we're HEAR when you need us," Trapp said.

I am a Good Listener Reviewing some paperwork for peer listening is junior Devin Thomas. "I have really enjoyed being a part of this group. It makes me feel like I can help people," Thomas said.

What a Nutcase Patiently attempting to listen is junior Elyse Cornwell, as sophomore Beau Hutchings talks about his fear of the dark. "Elyse was helping me cope with the fact that monsters live under my bed," Hutchings said.

Cute Cuddly Cubs Rearranging the peer listening board is sophomore Janna Hibler. "I like this poster of the Lion playing with his 'cubs'. The board has so much other useful information, about things like listening," Hibler said.

P-E-E-R-L-I-T "Is it the T or the S that comes next?" Comtemplating the correct spelling of the word "listen" is junior Jenna Sherman. "Designing shirts is the highlight of the year for us," Sherman said.

Secret Agent Hamm Reviewing some top secret peer listening documents are peer listening advisor Melanie Snodgrass and sophomore Ronald J. Hamm III. "I would like to tell you what we were doing, but that information is classified," Hamm said.

Roll Up your Pants and Bust a Move Busting out a famous move is actor Kevin Bacon to the famous song "Footloose." Actually, it's Ben "Beenjamin" Armstrong.

I'm Queen of the World Soaring through the air is senior Kate Lang. "Ryan is really strong so it was easy for him to keep me up in the air for so long," Lang said.

It's the American Bandstand Revealing his new moves is senior Jon Booth. "Fifties/ sixties day was fun. I'm glad I did it," Booth said.

Shake, Rattle, and Roll

For another year fifties/ sixties day has amazed and astounded the school. Every year the seniors take part in this and many new moves are added.

"I was kind of shocked with some of the moves in the dancing, but it's all in good fun I'm sure," junior Abby Lake said. Of course, many dances are traditional, such as the Bunny Hop, the Twist, and as always, the Limbo contest.

Once again Mr. "Ben-Jammin" Armstrong came out with a show of himself impersonating Kevin Bacon from the movie Foot-loose.

"I just like to give the kids a good show, plus I think I have pretty good guitar [yard stick] skills," Armstrong said.

"The whole dancing in front of the school thing is a little scary, but I think you loosen up a little once you get out there and start dancing," senior Amy Eaton said.

So the tradition of fifties/ sixties day carries on throughout the years with director, choreographer, and long time member Mr. Ben Armstrong. "May the days of the past live on," Armstrong said.

50s and of 2002.

Right Foot, Left Foot, Right Foot, Switch Showing off their dancing feet are seniors Ashley Sobel and Ian Stewart. "Ian's a good dancer. I'm glad I got to show the school how smooth our moves are," Sobel said.

How Loose is your Goose How low can you go? Only Jon Ziskal knows as he shows everyone his Limbo moves. "I just pulled out my pants from fifth grade and showed my Limbo moves for the ladies," Ziskal said.

Leading the Way

Developing the leadership skills necessary for success and competing to win.

"We've had a long legacy of leading the way, and this year is no different," freshman Amanda Segar said. At the beginning of the year the FFA recieved a National Chapter Award for its Legacy of Learning program. The winning continued in the spring when the Ag Issues team of senior Erin Segar, sophomore Meghan Bailey, junior Alyssa Reiniger, and junior Myra Hamilton competed at the district level. Freshmen Stephanie Stockel and Amanda Segar participated in the Green Hand Contest and senior Anthony Swafford took part in the Job Interview Contest.

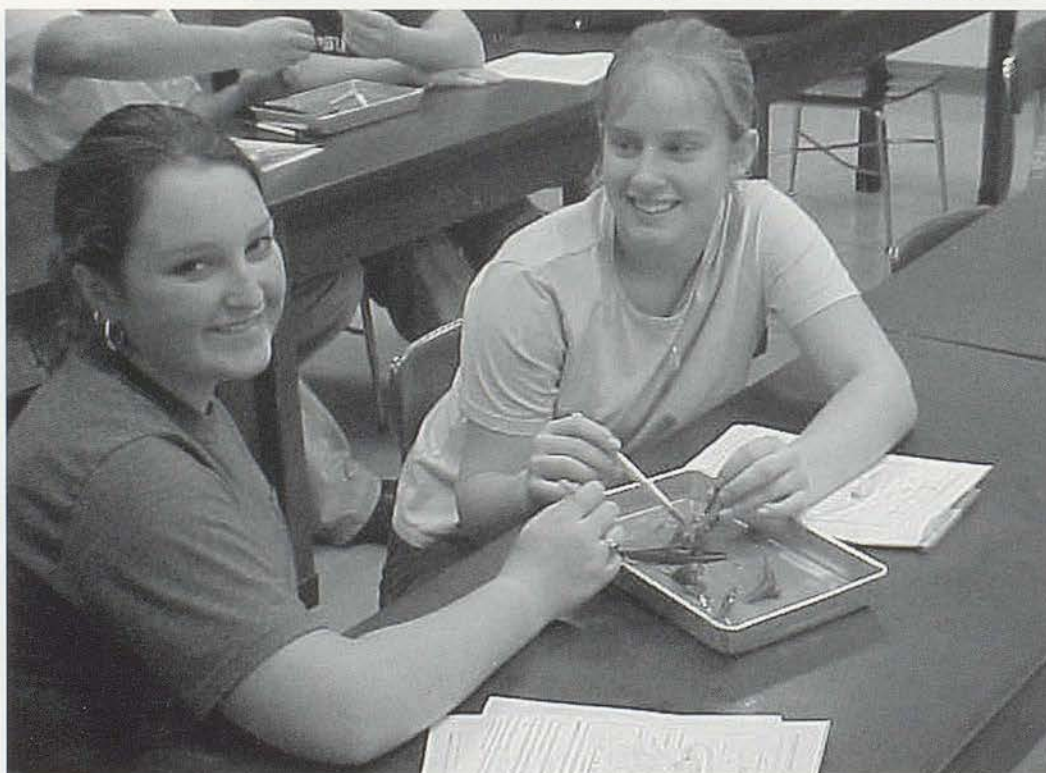

At the State Convention members were also recognized for their achievements. Erin Segar, Myra Hamilton, and Kurtis Washburn were named "Outstanding Juniors" and senior Todd Segar recieved his state FFA degree.

Members of the team volunteered their time to teach local children about the environment and help out environmental organizations. They also organized fundraisers at various times of the year. In the winter they host their annual fruit sale, and in the spring they organize a plant and vegetable sale.

Tastes Like Chicken Selecting Chickens for the FFA Boiler Contest are senior Anthony Swafford, junior Alyssa Reinger, and freshman Robert Carr. "You have to be very choosy about your chickens," Carr said.

Eww...Gross Performing a dissection in Aquatic Science class are juniors Myra Hamilton and Erin Segar. "The room smelled like fish for days," Hamilton said.

How Does Your Garden Grow? Watering the flowers left over from the horticulture sale are freshman Amanda Segar and junior Megan Bailey. "The flower sale requires a lot of work, but it's a great way to raise money and at least I get out of seminar to water them," Bailey said.

Lining Up Waiting for a session to begin at National Convention are seniors Jason Fry and Dustin Thomas along with junior Doug Hoffman. "We were just hanging out waiting for the guest speaker to arrive," Fry said.

The Floor is All Yours Preparing to receive his State Degree at the State Convention is senior Todd Segar. "I was very honored. All my hard work and dedication finally paid off," Segar said.

Working Hard Testing a piece of wire by running a current through it and looking at the wavelengths on a special machine is junior Justin Kazmar. "I enjoy the CATC because instead of just sitting in a desk I get to do things like soldering," Kazmar said.

Focused on the Monitor Listening to the teacher explain the day's lesson is senior Philip Coats. "I enjoy working with computers, and the classes at the high school are limited," Coats said.

Deep In Thought Working on a computer at the CATC is senior Nate Matako. "I took the class at CATC because I am thinking about going into the computer field after high school," Matako said.

Focused on the Future

The CATC offers students the chance to get a head start on life. Juniors and seniors from schools within Calhoun County are given the chance to go and learn at the Calhoun Area Technology Center. The CATC does not teach the classes that a regular high school education offers but gives students an opportunity to learn skills that are needed for different specific careers. The careers range from nursing and the medical field to mechanics and technology related fields. "It has a lot of different people, and it is really up to date," junior Nick Tefft said. The students that attend the CATC spend either the first or second half of their school day at the CATC instead of their high school. The skills that the students acquire will help them get jobs directly out of high school or could help them get a head start on the college program that they want to pursue. The classes are much more personalized because the students only learn what they want to. The students at the CATC spend their days working on cars, designing computer programs, and visiting hospitals...whatever interests them the most. "I like the CATC because I am choosing what I want to learn," junior Kim Odette said.

Goofing Around Sitting at the computer is junior Tanner Vincent. "I don't really do anything in this class. We mostly just mess around on computers," Vincent said.

Messing Around with Paint Testing a paint sprayer on the top of a box is senior Jake West. West is one of several seniors attending classes at the CATC. "I like the class because at the end of the semester we get to bring in cars and work on projects that we choose. I don't have a project right now, but it is still fun," West said.

Total Domination Darting into the open field is freshman Kyle Laughtenheiser. "The bigger schools in the S.M.A.C. conference didn't expect us to be able to hang with them this year. We didn't just hang with them, we dominated them," Laughtenheiser said.

Ready to Roll Warming up before a tennis match is junior Jamie Rush. "I love tennis. It is a blast. I had a great time playing this year, as well as hanging out with the girls on the team," Rush said.

Bang! About to drop a bomb in this Coldwater Cardinals eye is sophomore Patrick McCloskey.

McCloskey was honorable mention all-state this year. "I thought the new conference was good for us. We played some really tough teams that prepared us for the play-offs and the future," McCloskey said.

Put Me in Coach Checking into the first game of the 2002 Regional Girls Basketball Tournament is senior captain Cheryl Hedges. "We weren't able to win regionals, but we did win districts. Winning districts was an awesome experience," Hedges said. Cheryl Hedges was awarded the 2002 Bill Holt Award for her excellence in all of her sports which included basketball, volleyball, and track.

Seeing Themselves as Leaders of the SMACK

No longer a Twin, the 'Skins lay the SMACKdown.

2002 brought changes to the sports scene. The Competitive Cheer Team began as a varsity sport. Boys were on the sideline cheerleading for the first time in a few years. The Redskins also left the old

Twin Valley Conference to enter the new Big 16 or S.M.A.C. conference. The S.M.A.C. forced the athletes to go up against new competition. Sometimes this meant facing teams from bigger schools that played a class above them. Many people did not expect the Twin Valley teams to hold their own against the bigger competition in the state. In the end, though, the teams continued their winning ways and success. Six Division titles, four District championships, and two Regional championships later, the 2001-2002 seasons proved this success. Some teams were not able to complete their championship dreams, but each and every team had some sort of success. The athletes gave up months at a time to compete and put themselves on the line in front of huge crowds night after night as they went out and represented their school to the best of their abilities.

Soccer or Football?

Tackling his opponent is senior Justin Allmond. "Sometimes I tend to get maybe a little too into it," Allmond said.

One Team, One Mind, One Goal The team strides toward the crowd after their game. "We were not just a bunch of individuals this year, we were a family," junior Derek Schook said.

Till Death Do Us Part

Uniting as a family to become more than just a team.

What could a newcomer, a musician, and the president of the student body possibly have in common? Soccer. Twenty guys of all different personalities and abilities came together to form the varsity soccer team. They began the season in a brand new league, the Southwestern Michigan Athletic Conference. They traveled from Lakeview to Loy Norrix, and placed 5th in the 16 team conference.

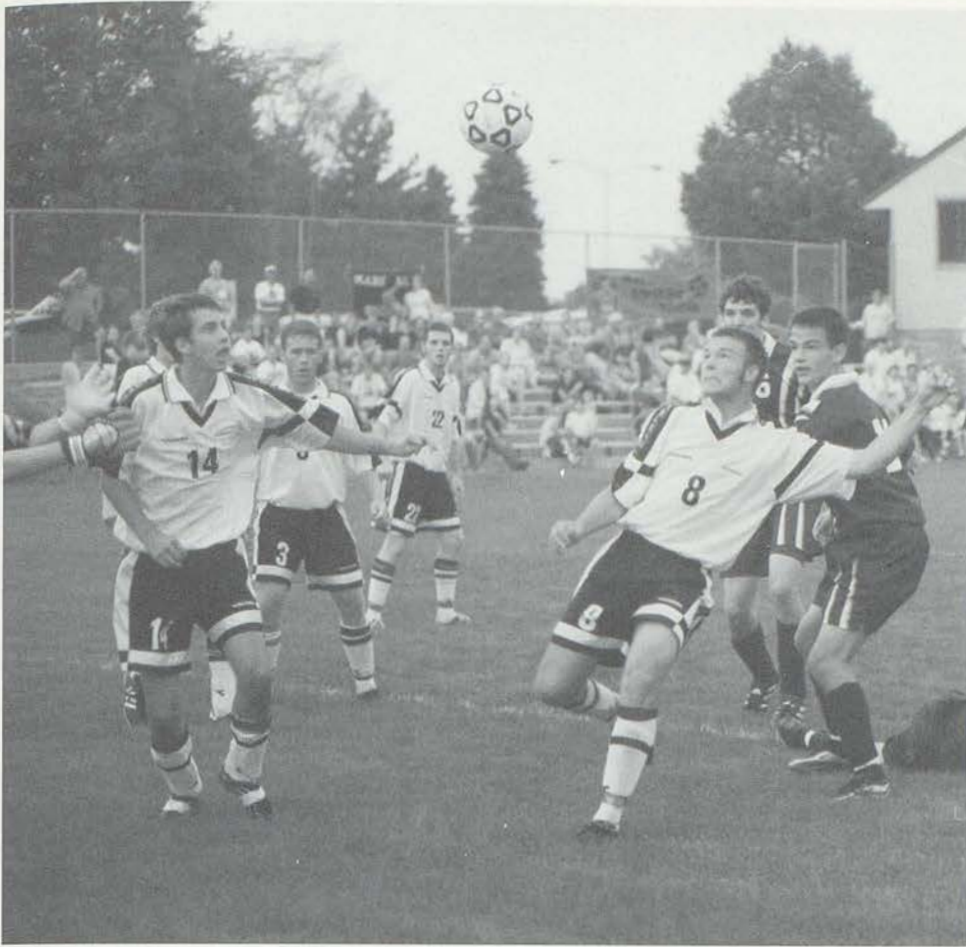

"Our best game was against Portage Northern because even though we lost, we surprised them by playing really well as a team," senior Nick Zalewski said.

They entered their playoff season with two wins in a row against Harper Creek and Comstock but were stopped at Kalamazoo Hackett in the district championship game. Unity, as stated by the Webster's Dictionary, is "to bring together so as to make one, and to cause to become attached."

"Our record, 15-5-1, has definitely shown that we can play tough and play together," junior Navin Srinivasan said. "Being on the team is a big part of my life. I couldn't imagine high school without it."

Heads Up! Guarding the ball as it falls to the ground is junior Jon Hammond and senior Justin Allmond with seniors Kail Robinson and Greg Wicklund close behind. "It's important to always be focused and watching the ball during the game," Hammond said.

A Man With Vision As opponents crumble beneath him, senior and co-captain Dave Palchak pays no attention. "When it comes to soccer, I show no mercy," Palchak said.

Catch Me If You Can Edging out his opponent is senior Seth Presley. "I was tearing it up like no other that game," Presley said.

One Step Ahead Racing to hold off their opponents are defenders junior Jeff Cox and senior and co-captain Kail Robinson. "I love being around those guys and a great coach too," Robinson said.

Mullet Mascot A symbol the team used this year to pump up the players was sophomore Alex Hamil's (#14) Mullet hairdo. "My Mullet gives my team strength and ability to defeat our opponents," Hamil said.

4-4-2 United as One

Combinations for a Victory...

On a field with eleven individuals working with one another, communication is the key to victory. With a playing field that is 90 x 110 a team must have other ways to understand one another. "Our team usually wins when we move the ball well, but when we can't understand each other, we come up short," sophomore K.C. Bailey said.

What's in a name?

When playing on a team sometimes a player is stuck with a nickname. Freshman Jacob Simmons is referred to as the "squirrel". "We call him the squirrel because of his looks and the way he runs on the field," sophomore Keegan Dillon said. "I like to throw the ball in pretending it is a nut because I am good with my hands," Simmons said.

Junior Varsity Boys Soccer

No scores available

Battle Mode The team walks onto the field against Battle Creek Central. "We went out to kick some booty," sophomore Jeremy Pierce said. They did kick booty with a score of 4-1.

Magical Momentos To help maneuver the defense in games, freshman Kevin Schook (#9) wears a shoelace on his head. "When I wear a shoelace on my head I lose my fear and play with my incredible instincts that always get me past the defense," Schook said.

Power Kick Against B.C. Central, sophomore (#16) K.C. Bailey is fighting through the defense. "I was executing my triple fakeout trick against B.C. Central," Bailey said. After this move Bailey had an assist to put Marshall further into the lead.

Game Time Before every game, the Lady Skins go out to the floor and get together without the coaches. "We got ourselves ready to play," junior Beth Anne Murphy said.

To the Rack Driving the lane is junior Amber Huffman. She admits she might've been small for her position, but she wasn't intimidated. "We might've lacked in height, but we never lacked in heart," Huffman said.

Stepping Up Waiting for the Coldwater player to put up her shot, sophomore Sarah Richardson is ready to rebound. "People got hurt and so I got the chance to step it up, so I just did my best," Richardson said.

Listen Up, Ladies
Gathering her troop to make one last push late in the game against Jackson County Western is Coach Konkle. The Skins came up short on this night, but bounced back to knock the Panthers out of the districts.

En Fuego Stepping up to the free throw line is junior Beth Anne Murphy. She poured in both of these two free throws to help drown the Cardinals. "We really put the hurtin' on Coldwater in this one," senior Shannon Duffey said.

Inconsistent and Determined

These two words tell the story of all the highs and lows that this group of girls had to go through

The varsity girls basketball team ended the year hot, winning their last four regular season games. One of those was a win against Harper Creek that forced the Beavers to share the division title. The Lady Skins marched into their district and brought some hardware back home.

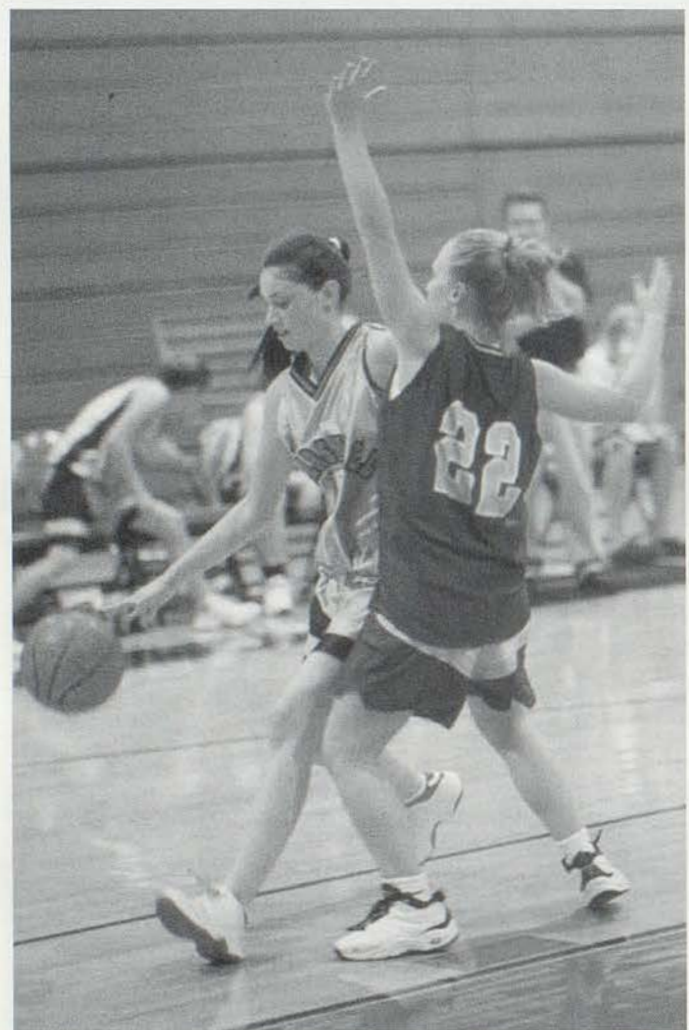

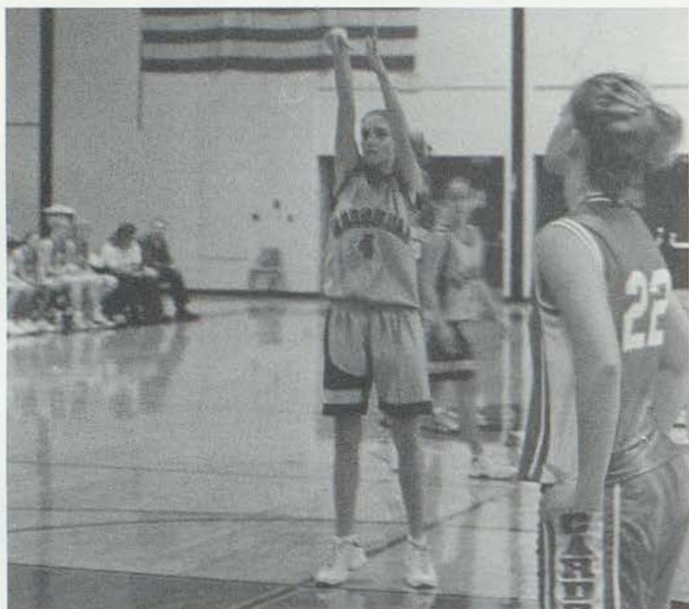

Along with the good, though, came some bumps in the road. Two losses to Lakeview, inconsistent play, and a loss to Niles that ended the season were some of the bumps. "We worked hard and gave 100% in practice; it just didn't show in the games sometimes. When it did though, it was awesome," Murphy said.

The Lady Skins were young this year. "We are a young team, and so we made some mistakes this year. Those mistakes, and some lessons we learned from older players will make us tough to beat next year!" junior Amber Huffman said.

Spitting Advice Getting some advice from coach Konkle is senior Beth Scherer. "Sal always pushed me to my limits. She knew I could do better even when I thought I was doing my best," Scherer said.

With All Eyes Watching "I was taking two shots for the lead. It gets pretty intense when everyone is watching. Well, maybe not everyone goes to the freshman games, but enough people do," freshman Megan Mackey said.

Base Line Runner "I just had to take it to the hole past this girl. She ended up fouling me though, and I made both shots," sophomore Jennifer Johnston said. Marshall came out victorious in the game against Jackson County Western.

Improving One Step At a Time

What is the difference between freshmen and junior varsity basketball? "The difference between freshmen and j.v. basketball is the expectation of the level you are supposed to play at. Two different teams, two different coaches, so many things are different. From practices to individual goals," sophomore Molly Hazel said. "Both teams were very strong this season. The freshman had a 15-5 record and j.v. also had a 15-5 record," sophomore Ali Wills said. "I played on j.v. as a freshman and skipped the freshman team. I look forward to playing on j.v. next year, and continuing to keep on learning and playing basketball," freshman Megan Mackey said.

Raw Determination Fighting for the rebound against Jackson County Western is freshman Marge Johnson. "After the free-throw shot, the girls just didn't know that it was my ball. I showed them though," Johnson said.

Batter Up A large part of tennis practice is used to practice swings. "The backhand is my favorite shot to use against the other team because I have a lot of power," junior Jessica Leahy said.

Follow-Through Laughing at her last shot are juniors Devin Thomas and Samantha Hughes. "Beating Lakeview was by far the best part of the season," Thomas said.

You Can't Blame It On The Rain

A few raindrops could not put out the fire that the varsity girls sparked.

This year's season is one for the record books. The team's season record was 5-4-1. "We had a winning record and our top finish ever at regionals for 3rd place," Coach Foreman said. "Also, we beat Lakeview, and we had never beaten them in our history." The season was memorable for other reasons, too. Sophomore Kathryn Kennedy remembers one rainy day on the way to a match. "The vans are crappy, and it was raining buckets. The fog things didn't work, and in the back of the van, the window started leaking! We almost drove into a lake!" Kennedy said. Making it through the rainy season, the team saw sunshine in every victory.

The Grass is Always Greener... During an intense match, junior Amber Maurer gets advice from Coach Foreman. "He was telling me what I was doing right and what I had to work on," Maurer said.

Ready, Aim, FIRE! Jumping up to make a shot is junior Kealey Cottrell. "I was slamming my massive overhead trying to avoid the opponent, who was probably running off the court screaming," Cottrell said.

One-legged Overhead Standing on one leg and finishing an overhead is sophomore Megan Richey. "After a long match, I was just fooling around with Buj, and I slammed an overhead at her. I love playing the net," Richey said.

Swingin' Away the Afternoon As one of the senior captains, Essie Galloway plays second singles. "Our top two players, Essie and Becca, didn't always win, but they set up the team to win," Coach Foreman said.

Watch Out, Here I Come Waiting for the serve is sophomore Danielle Roberts. "I was at the Lakeview tournament and I was really tired. I always try to give my best though," Roberts said.

New year, New coach, New possibilities

With a different approach to a winning season.

Most teams have roots to grab onto. Most teams have traditions, inside jokes and old friendly coaches that have been around for years. JV tennis has a different story to tell since they have changed coaches every year for the past four years. With each new coach also comes a fresh perspective.

"I think it's good and bad. It's good because they always have new ideas for practice and methods of coaching. It can be bad because we have to get used to those same reasons," sophomore Emily Boedecker said.

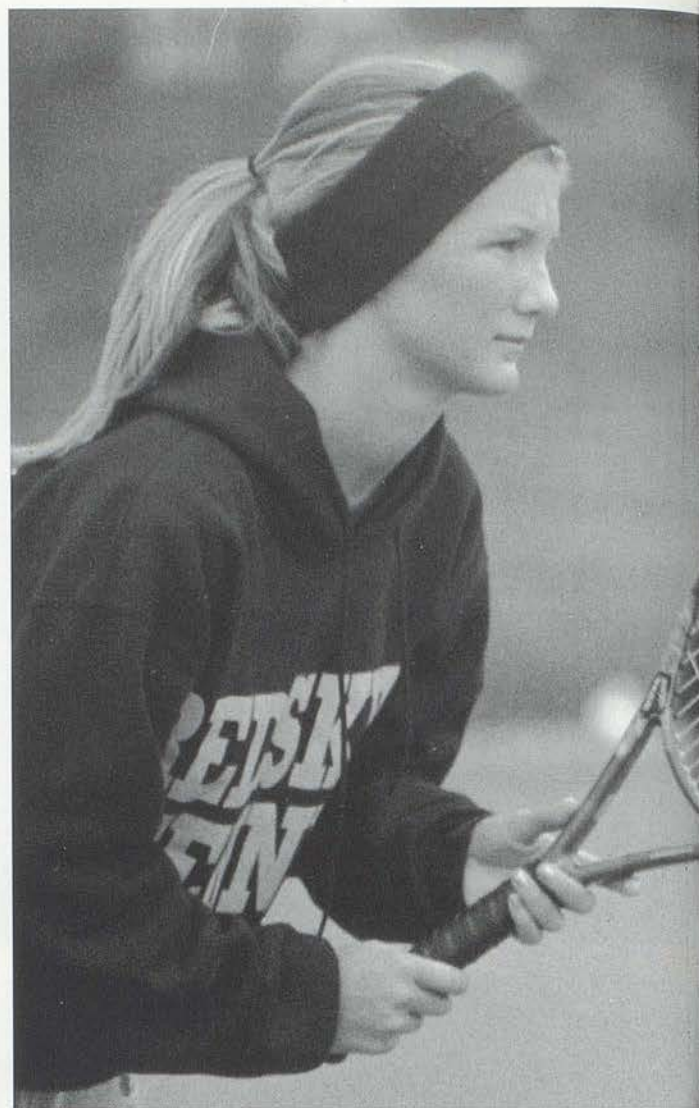

"He motivated us a lot more than last year and helped us with our matches," sophomore Lauren Killewald said.

"We are here to make varsity better, and we are here to make varsity," Coach Morris said. Morris' new roots proved growth with the 8-3-1 in regular season play.

Bring it On!! Getting ready to play the one match that actually matters is junior Jaime Rush. "We were playing Sturgis, that was the game that we needed to get first place. It was a tense match, but we controlled our adrenaline and won first place," Rush said.

Yes! We're the Best Slapping their rackets together are freshmen Sheila Srinivasan and Lauren Hyland. "Our coach thought he was punishing us for arguing by making us play doubles together, but we were having a great time," Srinivasan said.

That Wasn't Supposed to Happen Scratching her head as she walks away from a match is sophomore Lauren Hyland, "I was feeling depressed because we just lost a really close match to Strugis," Hyland said.

Staying Strong Serving it up again is sophomore Lauren Bujdos. "I want to win, and I'll do whatever I can to win," Bujdos said.

Bring it in Boys The team comes together to discuss their next play. "We were strategically talking about what we should do next," junior Ben Taylor, (36) said.

Watch Out Running toward the endzone, trying to hold on for the touchdown, is senior Tyler Bradshaw, (12). "I was just trying as hard as I could to push past him," Bradshaw said.

Get 'Em Boys Marshall surrounds the opposing player lying on the field. "It feels so good to know you've won that battle and be able to shove it in their face," senior Kevin Murphy, (85) said.

Starting Line Up As the the crowd roars, the players on the field are ready to jump toward those Cardinals and rip them apart. "There's a lot of trash talk that goes on during line up," senior Steve Hyland, (42) said.

Sweat, Pain, and determination

...As a team, all that's felt is glory.

Facing a new year and a new conference, this team still follows all the same old traditions. They had 8 wins and 1 loss to take first in the SMAC league. This was Marshall's first year playing most of these teams and conquered all but one. Marshall moved on to be District Champs with a win over arch rival Harper Creek in the last five seconds of the game. "We started out with only the coaches and the team believing we would actually come out on top," senior captain Jon Booth said. The Redskins ended their season in the final four with a loss to Orchard Lake St. Mary's. Their final record was 11-2. The captains of the 2001 Varsity Football team were seniors Jon Booth, Ryan Meeder, and Austin Lortz. These three led their team day after day through every practice and each Friday night's combat. Every game the stands were filled with Marshall fans; no matter where the team traveled, the fans were not far behind. Many fans showed their spirit in various ways. For example, the senior girls wore Marshall football shirts every Friday with a senior football member's name and number printed on their back. Kids throughout the community would wear red and black supporting the Redskin tradition. In the end, a team of fifty-seven individual players came together to form one; to feel the victory together.

High Quality H2O After making a tackle freshman Doran Siebert takes a break. "We were grateful for our water boy. He was a big help," Seibert said.

The Beginning Starting another scoring drive is sophomore Casey Eash. "When Ryan says, 'down,' it all begins. When I hear him say, 'set,' I prepare to put the ball in his hands, and when he says 'go,' it's perfection between us," Eash said.

Opening Holes Lead-blocking for the freshman football team is Joey Hutson. He opened a hole for Brad Fox to scamper to another first down. "When I lead block, there is always a hole big enough for a truck to drive through. In this case Brad was our truck, and we were driving toward the endzone," Hutson said.

Shake, Shake, Shake Returning a punt is sophomore Todd Gore. "When the ball is in the air, I worry about someone taking my head off. Once I catch it, I'm just looking to make a play," Gore said.

Smacking the SMAC

The new teams in the league heard a lot of talking, but in the end they did the walking.

It's the fourth quarter and the defense is on the field, totally exhausted, trying to turn back Harper Creek one more time to preserve an East Division SMAC title. "The time came for both defenses to stop Harper, so we flooded the Beaver's Dam," sophomore Jeremy Woods said. The freshman football team's record was nearly perfect, but a loss against Lakeview in the next to last game stopped their undefeated season. The Skins beat Harper to hang on to the division crown. "Next year, we want to have the same results, but with one more win," freshman captain Doran Siebert said. The JV football team not only had to fight its battles with other schools on Thursday nights, but they had to deal with some players making decisions during the year that did not benefit the team. "Our year was like a roller coaster, with lots of ups and downs. We lost a few players to unwise decisions, we had our first loss in high school football, and yet in the end, we pulled through," sophomore Todd Gore said.

"I think that the future looks good for both teams. I hope we can both make it to the Dome. That would be awesome," sophomore Casey Eash said.

Just Say No Playing middle linebakcer is freshman Neil Dopp. Dopp closed an open gap on this play and wrapped up the Loy Norrix defender in the back field for a loss. This was the only game that Dopp played middle linebacker. Later in the year he moved to fill other spots to help the team.

Following Through
Using a fully extended follow through, sophomore Tommy Saylor tries to make it to the green. "I had a horrible drive, and my second shot put it on the green. Finally, a two putter saved my par," Saylor said.

Make the Big Dog Eat
Getting ready for a drive as a member from the BC Central team watches for the ball's flight is sophomore Lance Crull. "I was just setting myself up," Crull said.

Long Walks, Good talks, Great Game

Long walks, breezy days and dropping strokes is what golf is made of. "On those walks, I concentrate on the next hole, what it's like, and the best angle to approach it," sophomore Sam Gallaway said. "On those long walks, I usually talk to my partners about the previous hole. What they shot, what we did wrong or what we did right, and how many under or over [we are]," sophomore Tommy Saylor said. Golf is a sport of skill, requiring an individual to take as few strokes as they can take to get the ball into the hole. Sophomore Lance Crull shot a hole in one in the final league meet. "I was so excited about it, I couldn't even believe it! A hole in one on one of the hardest holes," Crull said. The golf season is mostly made up of invitationals. The team placed in the top half of the field in the majority of the meets. "Since we had such a young and inexperienced team, the result was not a lot of success, but we did pretty well," coach Tom Reynolds said.

Wow... A Straight Shot Hitting the ball straight through the woods, Lance Crull swings to the target. "Wow! Straight through the woods, but my swing looks good," Crull said.

Hole in One? Shooting for a hole-in-one, junior Josh Coles takes a mighty swing so the ball can head for its home. "My swing looks so good. You can even see my ball heading for a hole-in-one, hopefully," Coles said.

Bogey or Birdie Swinging slowly away from the tee, senior Chad Duckwall practices his drive. "I'm really concentrating on my drive, so I don't get a double bogey," Duckwall said.

Fore Showing his near parallel backswing, sophomore Sam Galloway pauses before his downswing. "I have such a powerful drive; it's one of those priceless things," Galloway said.

Concentration Stepping up to the platform is senior captain Becky Lathers. "I get really nervous. It was a big season for me," Lathers said.

Water Cheers "The water cheers are the funnest part of the meet. We all gather in a circle around Crabby Joe, the loudest of them all. It helps bring the team together and gets us ready to beat whoever is next to us," sophomore Jenna Sherman said.

Jump-In

Hold your breath, grab a fin, and come along for the ride.

Many improvements came with the girls swim team this year. One of the most notable was the state team. They had twelve girls on the team compared to five last year. The excitement was felt by junior Jenny Henry, who was one of the girls who made it to state. "You have to do everything in a short race. You can't mess up at all. Your flip turn has to be perfect, your dive has to be perfect, and your finish has to out touch everyone. Fingertips are important. Your goal is to get to state, after three years you learn how to have fun and not get stressed," Henry said.

Water Baby "This season my backstroke got a lot better. It is a lot of fun because you get to breathe more than in any other strokes," sophomore Stephanie Hamlin said.

Just a Little Bit Longer Concentrating on keeping up his speed is sophomore Noah Kerr. "I'm feeling great, but it's not physically, it's from the heart not the mind," Kerr said.

A Journey of a Thousand Miles...

...Begins with a single step.

Improving is one thing, but going to state is quite another as Phil Baranowski experienced. Being competitive is very important. "I wasn't surprised I went to state this time because I qualified my sophomore and junior years," Baranowski said. "We've improved a lot. Last year our top two or three runners were competitive with the better teams. This year the top five runners are more competitive, and it's made a difference," Coach Unruh said.

Butterfly Discussing the upcoming race while they stretch are sophomore Eric Richey and seniors Wes Schoenherr and Pete Cruz. "I stretch, I drink water, and I listen to 'Eye of the Tiger' to prepare for a race. I feel nervous, because I don't know how I'm going to do or how I'm going to feel during the race," Cruz said.

Run, Eban, Run! Pushing each other to retain their lead over the Lakeview runner are sophomore Eban Mackey and junior Devin Hurst. "I always feel like I just started, because I like racing. The competition is a rush," Mackey said.

Wee!!! Stretching out and up in his victory dance is junior Devin Hurst. "After beating inter-team rivals Josh Deno and Eban Mackey at league, I celebrated," Hurst said.

Does This Look Like a Crab? Working to stretch his leg muscles is senior Phil Baranowski. "I was stretching my quads to loosen up my legs before I race. I don't really get cramps," Baranowski said.

Motivation "When I am racing, I usually have some good tunes in my head, but what really gets me movin' is when my coach is screaming at me on the sidelines to get a better place," sophomore Janna Hibler said.

Taking Care of Business "In a race, all I think about is getting it done with," sophomore Bev Twiss said. Twiss did the race over with and earned a third place finish with a time of 20:21.

Stretch Armstrong Before a race it is important to stretch more than legs, according to sophomore Caitlin Wettle. "We stretch our arms to help us pump up the hills," Wettle said .

Accomplishments "I'm just glad to be done after a hard race," junior Monica Long said. Long is standing tall after hearing her time of 21:42 and second place finish.

Individual Times, Team Effort

When one thinks of cross country they may think of running every day through the same boring fields. Reality tells a different story. It is a story about girls cross country running night and day; rain or shine; cold or warm. "The team did very well this season. The team didn't win all of their meets, but by the end of the season each girl improved from the first meet," coach Wissink said.

Rejuvenation Notion After a race, it is important to drink a water to replenish fluids lost in competition. "After this race, there wasn't any water at the finish line. The girls were pretty upset that time," sophomore Megan Fitzpatrick said. Fitzpatrick searched the field and found her precious water.

Showing 'Skins
 Showing off their painted ponies are junior Melissa Cole, sophomore Krystal DeLaney, junior Kati Reid, and sophomore Sarah Farmer. "I was getting ready for a speed race, and us girls on the speed team wanted to get our picture done before we went out," Cole said.

Together They Ride...

Individuals compete as one.

The team finished 9th in the state with a total of 369 points. "I personally did fairly well. I think it went ok, but I could have done better. My best performance was in the clover leaf," junior Katie Reid said.

There are all different types of equitation in equestrian. There's barrel racing, flags, 2 man relay, saddle seat, key-hole, western, English, western riding, and saddle seat showmanship.

"I did good this year, and so did the team and I'm happy about that. This year we had a variety of girls doing different things which helped the team out," junior Brittany Byrens said. All their hard work and time paid off, seeing as they finished first in districts.

Good Horsey Preparing her horse before going out and performing is sophomore Ashley Glover. "I was getting ready to show in saddle seat. It only took me a few minutes to get my horse ready," Glover said.

Super Scoopers Equestrian isn't all fun and games, as junior Melissa Cole and sophomore Krystal DeLaney find out. "I was cleaning out the stalls at state. We'd never cleaned them before because our parents usually do it," DeLaney said.

StayOn Putting names on chairs for her teammates is sophomore Jessica Adams. "I was helping my team by putting their names on their chairs, so they wouldn't lose them. I like to help out my team in any way I can," Adams said.

Go This Way Getting her horse ready to show is junior Katie Reid. "I'm involved in barrel racing, flags, 2 man relay, saddle seat fitting and showing, and key-hole," Reid said.

Emotions Showing that cheering isn't all smiles are senior Katie Lange and sophomore Sarah South. They comforted each other after the loss against Orchard Lake St. Mary in the semi-finals. "It was a hard fought loss, but it happened for a reason. We had an awesome season and had the desire to go further," Lange said.

Above The Rest Showing off her stunting ability is senior Jennifer Silvers. "Stunting takes a lot of hard work. It was better with all the boys because they are stronger and can throw higher than the girls," Silvers said.

Redskin Pride Clapping to the rhythm of the Redskin beat are sophomores Katlin Smith, Danielle Loughrige, Sierra Damron, and Melissa Edlund. "Cheerleading's fun because it kept me happy, it's like you get this permanent smile on your face. This year it also helped to keep me in shape," Damron said.

Show Your Pride Cheering on the basketball team during a home game is the varsity cheer team. "I like the cheer, but it's not my favorite, It's like almost my favorite. It's like my second favorite cheer but not my favorite. I like it because I look hot when I do it, but it's not my favorite," Heitmeyer said.

We've Got Spirit!

The last year the crowd was inspired by male cheerleaders was in 1999. This year the boys are back. With the guys on the team the stunting abilities increase with the added muscle.

"Coming into cheerleading we all thought that we were going to be made fun of, but we weren't. The other guys thought that it was pretty cool but we were the guys who got out there and did the unusual and it was actually pretty fun," junior Ben Taylor said.

To get the crowd pumped up, the varsity cheer team would throw tee-shirts and footballs to the crowd after touchdowns during home football games.

"Our teams both improved so much over both seasons.

Adding the boys to the team was a huge step for Marshall cheerleading. They helped to add a little variety," senior captain Shelby Breckenridge said.

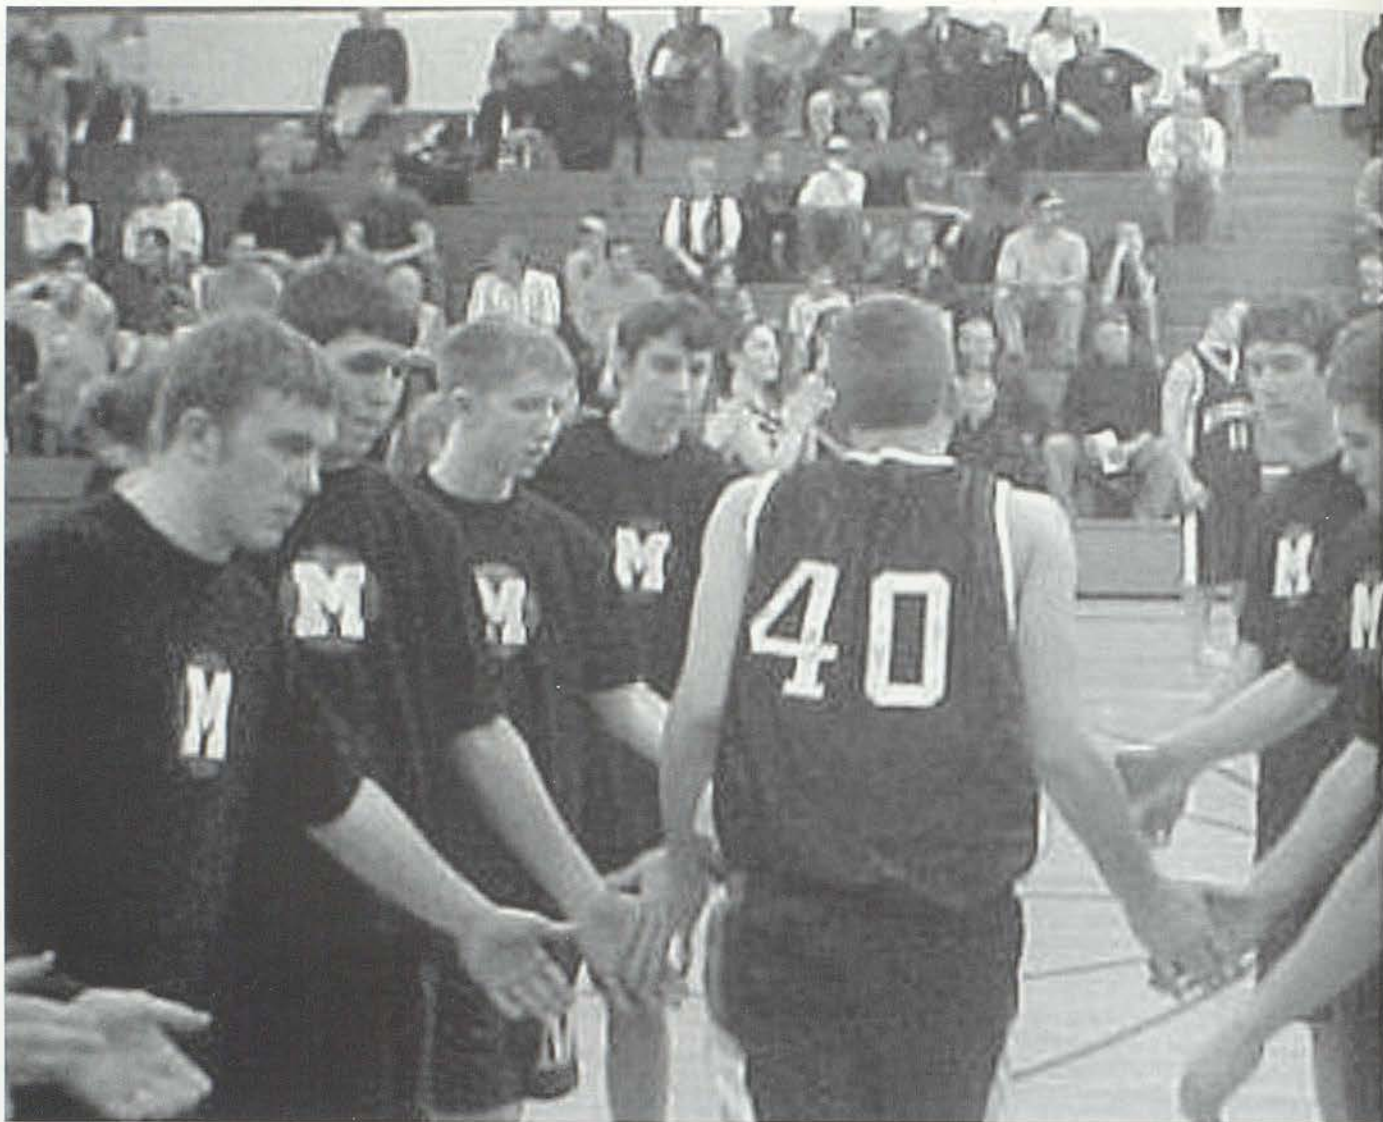

Whether boy or girl, basketball or football, they all have a common goal of cheering the Redskins to a victory.

Showing the crowd they have a reason to be proud.

United as One The freshmen and varsity cheer teams joined together at homecoming. "Cheering with the varsity was a good experience because we got to see what it was like to cheer for a bigger crowd," freshman Emily Scears said.

"Starting at Forward.."

Jogging out through a tunnel of teammates is sophomore Ryan Thomas. "I started about four games this year. I enjoyed being a spark off the bench more than starting," Thomas said.

The Ups and Downs

The story of a basketball team struggling to find its identity.

When the season began the 2002 varsity basketball team was a mystery to many. Only one starter returned, and he was a sophomore. The season had a rough beginning as injuries and inconsistent play plagued the team; this led them to a 0-3 start. "We caught some rough breaks and hadn't really meshed as a team yet," senior Matt VanDerMeulen said.

The team continued to practice, learn, and mesh. In the team's 9th game, they faced a Battle Creek Centreal team that was ranked number one in the area. Coach Dan Coddens would describe the game as a historic victory, as his team outplayed the Bearcats en route to a big win. Another high-point was in the district championship against Pennfield. The game went into double-overtime, but the Skins kept battling until they had some hardware to bring back to Marshall. "Even though we had some tough times, we kept working hard, and no one will ever be able to take away our district trophy or all of the memories left behind," senior Tyler LaFountain said.

It's Mine Tearing down a rebound away from a Harper Creek player is senior David Palchak. "I wanted the ball badly, so I went up hard and got it," Palchak said.

HOPS Getting up for a chest bump are seniors Jordan Feldpausch and Jon Booth. "It was a pre-game ritual. It was supposed to be a chest bump, but 'Pausch can't hop like me, so it was more of a chest to stomach bump though," Booth said.

Automatic About to put in a free throw is senior Josh Petty. "When I step up to the line I try to stay loose and focus on putting in the free throw," Petty said. Petty won the 2002 Free Throw Award for having the best percentage on the team.

The Sky is Falling Preparing for a rebound are freshmen Dennis Holmes and Ryan Storey. "Rebounding is one of the most important parts of the game because it's a big opportunity for a turnover," Storey said.

Pass Me If You Can
Guarding an approaching opponent from BCC is sophomore Lance Crull. "My defense tactics are often to lure them in and then attack," Crull said.

Pull Away! Gaining control of the ball is sophomore and co-captain Todd Gore. "I love to embarrass my opponents by leaving them in the dust," Gore said.

Leave Yourself Behind

The JV nearly dominated the new SMAC league, losing only one game to Albion. "I think one of our best games was against Albion because we really worked together and worked hard. The game even ended up in double overtime," sophomore Paul Baranowski said. They continued to rely on their teamwork to win games, even when they had to come from behind. "Against Colwater we had been down for a while, but we dug deep and came back strong," sophomore Nate Hughes said. The freshman had a record of 12-8. "Even though we lost our games to Sturgis, it was exciting to see how much better we were doing as a team," freshman Brendon O'Connell said. In the second game, they were coming back from a 15 point deficit, but lost in the last minute by one point. Throughout their seasons, both teams saw themselves unify and grow. "I was really happy with our season," freshman Dennis Holmes said. "I could tell we began to develop into a strong team."

Stepping on the court transforms individuals into a team.

The Power Hour

"I was doing my power spike down on the competition," senior Aubrey McCauley said. McCauley plays the middle because of her ability to spike.

Setting it up to Spike it down

Seeing themselves as tough and determined sets them apart.

What makes a player tough? Is it their strength? Is it their skill? Is it determination? The question is answered many different ways depending on each individual. Now the question is what makes a team? Is it measured in success?

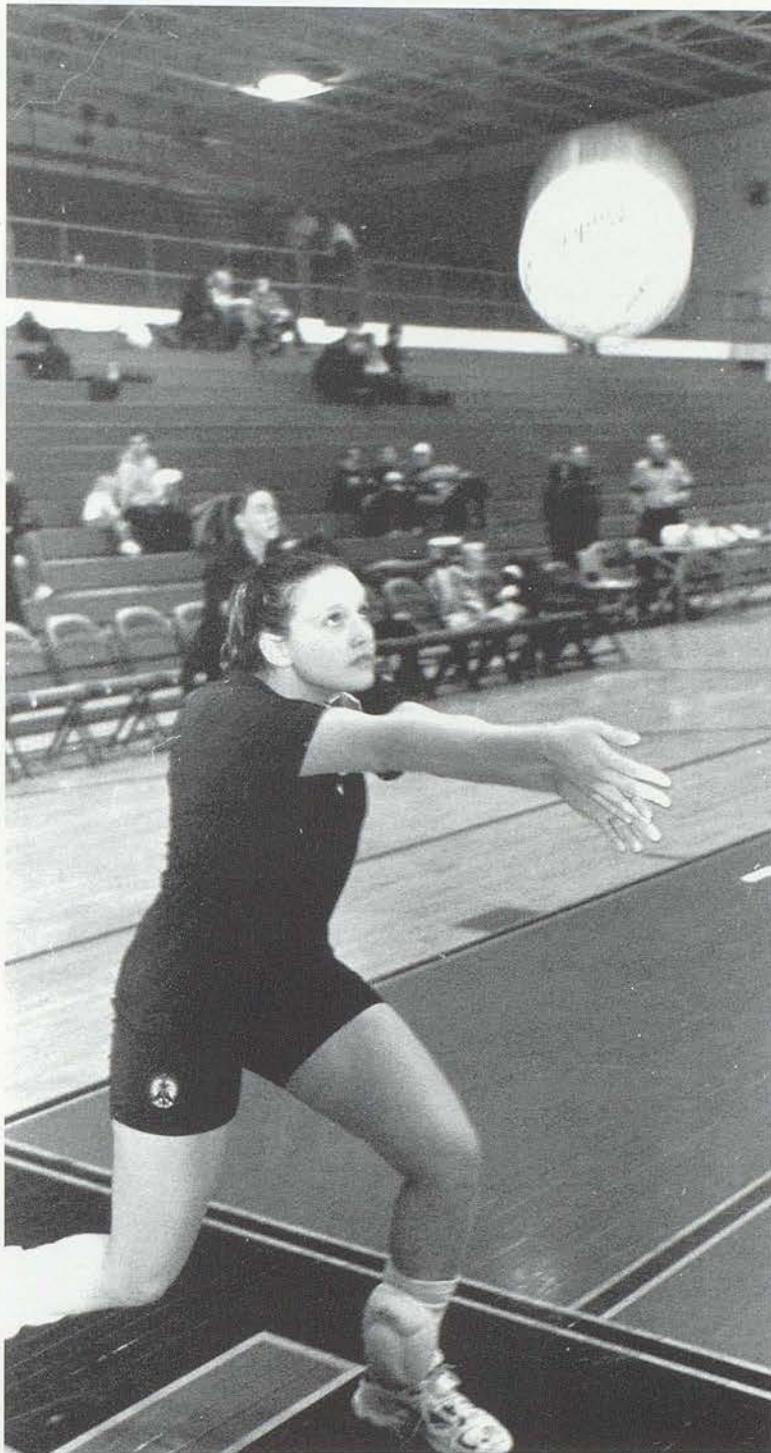

"Our squad looked really good this year. We had all the right tools to do well this season, and we managed to win a few games. Well a few games is better than none," junior Katie Murphy said.

"We didn't have the best record, but all the girls were very close. We had a lot of fun together, and that's what really counts," senior Erin Simmons said. When measured by victories this season the team wasn't the best, but when measured in by individual success they were the champs.

Words of Wisdom Sitting down and listening to a pre-game pep talk are seniors Erin Simmons and Cheryl Hedges. "Coach Morris was giving us a few pointers about our upcoming match against Battle Creek Central," Simmons said.

Eye On the Ball Following the ball to impact is junior Beth Anne Murphy. "I was just warming up my unstoppable bump. In a match my opponent will just run away from anything I hit because I am just that good," Murphy said.

Give It a Little Tap Tap Aroo Reaching up to tap the ball over the net against Sturgis in the second match is senior Aubrey McCauley. In the end Marshall lost to Sturgis 0-3.

My Concentration Motivation "Before the game I prep by just cooling down and relaxing. It's the only way I am able to serve well. When I go out on the court all stressed I will just mess up," junior Maggie Adams said.

Look What We Got The freshman volleyball team sits down to capture a winning moment. "This was right after our Strugis tournament, and we were all really excited about the trophy," freshmen Katie Wolf said.

Please Don't Hit My Face Getting under the ball, sophomore Janna Hibler gets ready to set it to her teammate. "I love the adrenalin. Here I was about to set a quick to Meg Richey, and those were the best!" Hibler said.

I Don't Think So Jumping at the net to guard a ball is freshman Lindsey Doneth. "I enjoy being close to the net because it allows me to help my teammates out when I get to block the ball," Doneth said.

Tight Shorts, Cute Pony Tails, and Fierce Game Faces

By switching things around and trying to get the new kids comfortable on the court the jv and freshman teams practice together. "I loved working with the the freshman team. All my friends were on it, and practices were a lot of fun," freshman jv player Anna Braner said. The coaches Gina Loveless and Kristen Heethuis bring the teams together for practice. "With twelve girls on the jv team and thirteen girls on the freshman team, it made for a large practice. It was hard work, but at the same time it was a ton of fun," sophomore Ally Trapp said. The jv team pulled out of their season with only 1 loss in districts. With a new coach, the freshman team managed to end their season with an 8 and 2 record.

Hanging by a Moment In the middle of their straight dive are junior Pat Carrington and senior Matt Thomas. "I was excited that we won because I felt that I did well along with the other divers," Thomas said.

The Fast and the Furious

Leaving old records in their wake.

The boys swim team faced many new teams this season in the S.M.A.C ring, but also faced old rivals from the Twin Valley. Despite their losses, the boys still managed to end with an 11-3 record. "We went up against more experienced teams that made our own team work hard, and together," freshman Nate Sykora said. "I love the collaboration amongst the team, while together we overcame many obstacles leaving us with a great season," junior Steven Weaver said. At the 2002 State Meet many goals were met and records broken by ending the season at 15th in state. "The best part of the swim season are the state meets because it pushes you to work hard to make it there, and then you get to compete against the fastest people in the state," sophomore Pat Jennings said.

Walk This Way Walking up to the victory podium is not a strange or new thing for senior captains Mike Driscoll, Brad Palik, and junior Steve Weaver. "Every time we step onto the podium makes practices seem so worthwhile," Palik said.

Get Pumped Up Trying to get pumped for the meet in their different ways are juniors Phillip Weare and Steve Weaver. "I was zoned out thinking about how small my Speedo was, while Steve was getting ready to swim with his light rock," Weare said.

Hold On to Your Speedo Performing his Twister dive is junior Pat Carrington. "I guess you could call it a twister gone bad. All I could think of was GERANAMO! Plus, I was gonna try to grab on to my Speedo because I knew that it was gonna be a hard hit," Carrington said.

Taking the Plunge Diving off the starting blocks is senior Mike Driscoll. "I knew that the water was gonna be cold, but I could not let that hold me back or slow me down," Driscoll said. He took first in his event.

Going the Distance With his teammates watching in the background at a tournament in Tecumseh senior Cy Willavize wrestles to a pin. "It was a pretty good season, and I finally made it to state with a record of 45-6," Willavize said.

Second Time Around Using a headlock on his opponent at Lakeview is sophomore Brad Judy. "I was proud of my second season here because I did well at the new league," Judy said.

Smells Like Team Spirit Using some of his moves on a wrestler from Coldwater is junior Bill Sleeper. "I was in the wrong place right then, but I soon won that match," Sleeper said.

Ready to Rumble

With their mind set on winning, the wrestlers headed into the new league. "It was a sexy season till everyone started to get hurt in the end, and we did not make it to state," junior Josh Damron said. The most Valuble Wrestler Awards went to senior Cy Willavize along with junior Nick Zuehlke. With all the right moves during the season, junior Bill Sleeper was the most improved wrestler on the team. With a seven second pin, Josh Damron had the fastest pin. The Redskin Pride award went to junior Ben Arnold. "Teamwork is one of the most important things...and working together to cheer on the team," Arnold said. Judy, Willavize, Zuehlke, and Sleeper all went to state.

Wrestlers challenge themselves one match at a time.

Just Working a Kink Out
Ending his approach in the home meet against Battle Creek Central is sophomore Rob Potter. "I am pretty sure I had just gotten a strike," Potter said.

Average is Everything

After 4 years of competition, the bowlers inch closer to a state title.

This marks the fourth year that bowling has been in action. The jv boys team took second place at the state tournament in Flint. The varsity boys won second place in regionals, and second place in conference. Sophomore Justin Stark had a perfect 300 game at regionals, with a final 748 series. "My 300 game was the best score I could have asked to have. I couldn't believe it. It made me happy," Stark said.

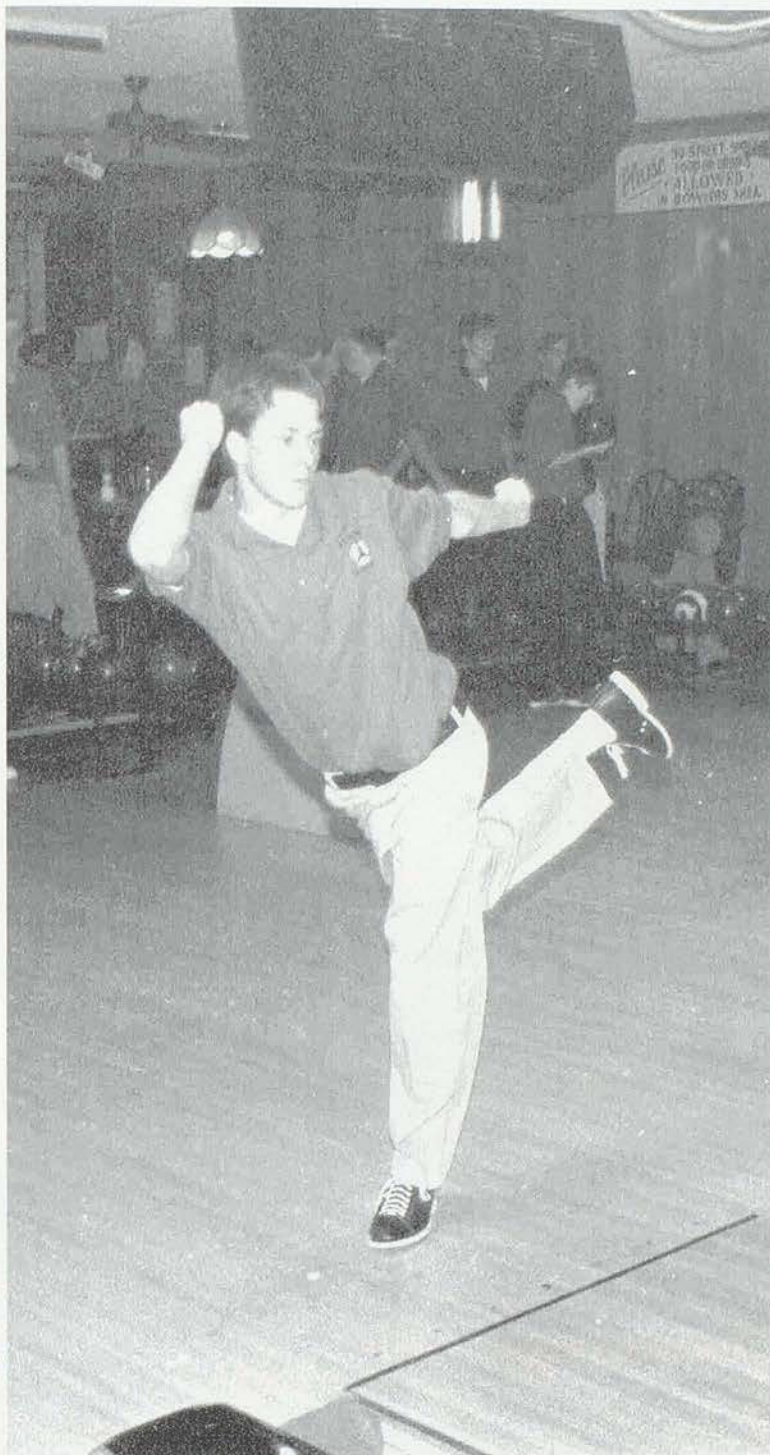

Sophomore Becky Woods won first place for the individual portion of regionals, and seventh place in state. "I made a goal at the beginning of the year to make it in the top 3 at regionals, and then go to state. And I did it," Woods said.

Official organizers recognized sophomores Becky Woods and Blaine O'Dell, junior Tom Stefan, and the jv boys team with scholarships for their outstanding scores at state tournament.

Practice Makes Perfect Practicing before the varsity meet against Jonesville are sophomore Jenna Behling, junior Ashley Heitmeyer, and senior Ashley Miller. "I like practice time, it gives me a few minutes just to warmup and get ready before a meet," Miller said.

Just Call Me "Slick" Following through after releasing his ball is sophomore Tommy Saylor. "I did good when we competed against Battle Creek Central. But then again, I did good in every meet we competed in," Saylor said.

Wait, Don't Go Yet! Using her practice time at Marshall Lanes is sophomore Jenna Behling. "I tried to go to every practice we had so that I would be ready for meets. I could also sort of plan on which marks to hit," Behling said.

Right Down the Middle Practicing at Marshall Lanes after school is junior Josh Coles. "I think we usually do pretty good at meets, so it's okay that we don't use very much time out of the week to practice," Coles said.

Different Faces Doing a little ball handling is sophomore Kristen Welch. "I had a lot of playing time this year. It was really good for me because I got to face different types of players than I would have on jv," Welch said.

New Challenges Making her way towards the goal is junior Monica Long. "This year was really different for me, even though I've been on varsity before. We had new challenges this season with the new league, and we lost a lot of good seniors last year, so I think we did really well," Long said.

New Ground Making the save is sophomore Meg Richey. "It was my first year on varsity, and it went really well. Playing with a whole new team and league really improved my playing," Richey said.

Making Every Shot Count

When the girls take the field, they know they must work as a team to get the job done.

This year's captains senior Erin Simmons, junior Monica Long, and junior Kristina Lord reinforced this theme. "Soccer was really great this year. We played really well together and our record reflected that," senior Jacie DeWeese said. The team's record was 14-5-1. They finished the season ranked ninth in the state and earned All State Academic honors with a cumulative GPA of 3.7.

"The team was really good, so they gave me a lot of time to work on my freestyle rappin'," junior goalkeeper Carrie Schroeder said. Schroeder and sophomore Megan Richey combined to allow only 25 goals while the offense scored 65 goals against opponents. The team and individual statistics were impressive and led to substantial post-season recognition. Sophomore Sarah Richardson, and juniors Saarah Boehmer and Carrie Schroeder earned All State honors, while seniors Erin Simmons, Beth Scherer, and Jacie DeWeese earned individual All State Academic honors. Juniors Monica Long and Kristina Lord were selected to the All District Team.

"All in all, I think this season was a success. We went out there and gave 110%, that's all we were asked to do," sophomore Lisa Clark said.

Using experience and skill, the varsity girls team goes 14-5-1.

Try and Keep Up Making her big get-away is junior Colleen Pierce. The opposing team was right on her tail, but Pierce out-ran them. Pierce was also a captain for this year's JV team.

Playing Their Way To The Top

The JV Girls are one step from varsity.

This year's team had an overall record of 9-6-2. The captains were junior Colleen Pierce, and sophomores Karie Saylor and Anna Doud. "Jv women improved tremendously over the season as our varied team of juniors, sophomores, and freshman solidified. The varied strength of players complimented each other with several shut outs and the long awaited win over Lakeview," coach Kathy Doud said. Many awards were passed out at the end of the season including the Most Valuable Player to Amber Petersen, Most Spirited to Anna Doud, Best Defense to Lauren Hyland, Best Offense to Colleen Pierce, Most Hard-Working to Megan Fitzpatrick, and Most Improved to Allison Potter. "This year's team showed considerable potential. I hope the girls work hard in the off season and come back prepared to play at the varsity level next spring," Coach Kevin McCauley said.

It's My Ball Fighting to take control of the ball with her opponent right on her side is sophomore Anna Doud. Anna saw a lot of playing time this year and was also one of the captains.

Gosh, I'm Good Capturing the ball with her knee trap is sophomore Dannielle Peterson. Having good ball handling skills is essential in the game of soccer.

KeepAway Guarding their goal from the threat of the nearby opponent are sophomore and captain Karie Saylor and freshman Amber Peterson.

I've Got It Reaching for the ball with hope of touching it before the opponent is freshman Danielle Hainline. Junior Ingrid Edwards is close by in case her assistance is needed.

Mine, Mine, Mine Attacking the ball at the net is senior Josh Petty. "Our season was successful because we accomplished our goals of having fun and making it all the way to state," Petty said.

Tennis Orchestrations

The team had a successful season this year. They qualified for state level competition. "Going to state was just an extra bonus for the season because we played very well all season long. We were all good friends, and that helped the season as well," junior Navin Srinivasan said.

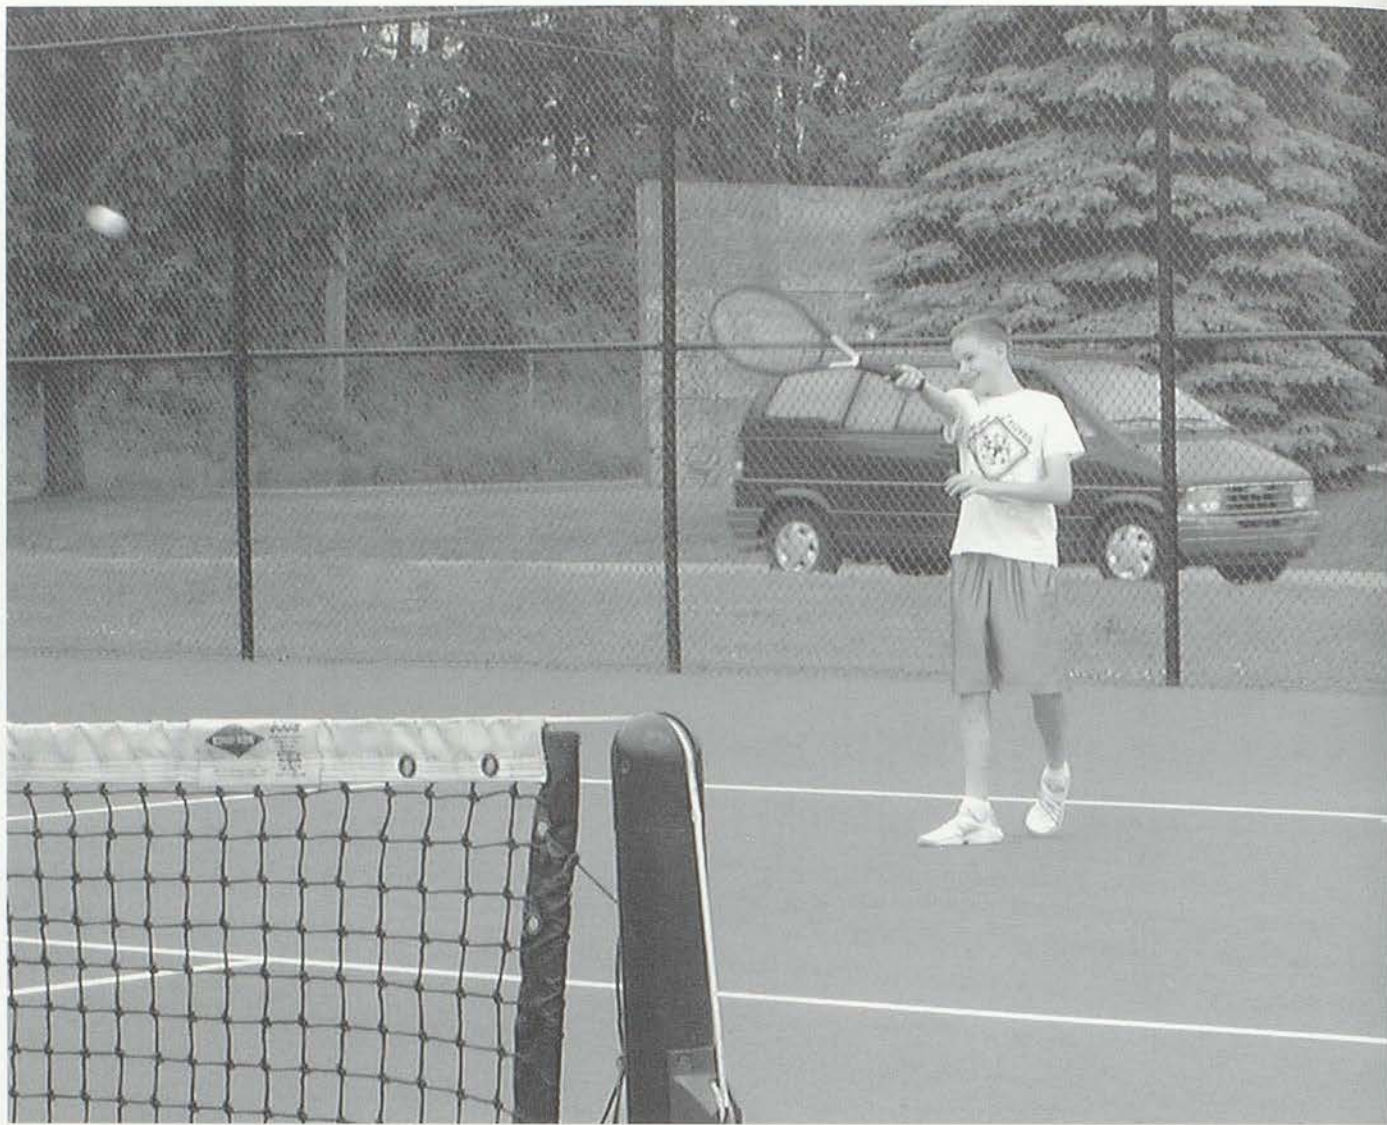

They had strong singles teams and doubles teams which contributed to the success of the season. They practiced hard on the court so they could do well in the competitions.

"We worked harder than ever on the practice court because we knew it would make our game so much better in the competitions," sophomore Robert Bess said.

Qualifying almost every member of the team for state and winning many tough matches, this team made beautiful music this season.

These strings make more of a racquet.

Give the Ball a Good Smack During practice freshman Jake Simmons lays down an overhand smash. "Even in practice I do my best. I think it makes me more ready for the meets," Simmons said.

It's Just a Matter of the Mind

Learning to "Be the Ball."

Boys jv tennis had 5-4 season this year. The boys competed in only one invitational this year and out of five teams, they came up second. Number one doubles were sophomores Brad Phillips and Paul Ousley. Number two doubles were sophomores Seth Burger and Dustin Sayers. Number one singles was sophomore Kegan Dillon while number two singles was junior Tom Edwardson.

"I enjoyed playing tennis this year. Since I was on jv, that meant I got more playing time and I could improve my game more," Edwardson said.

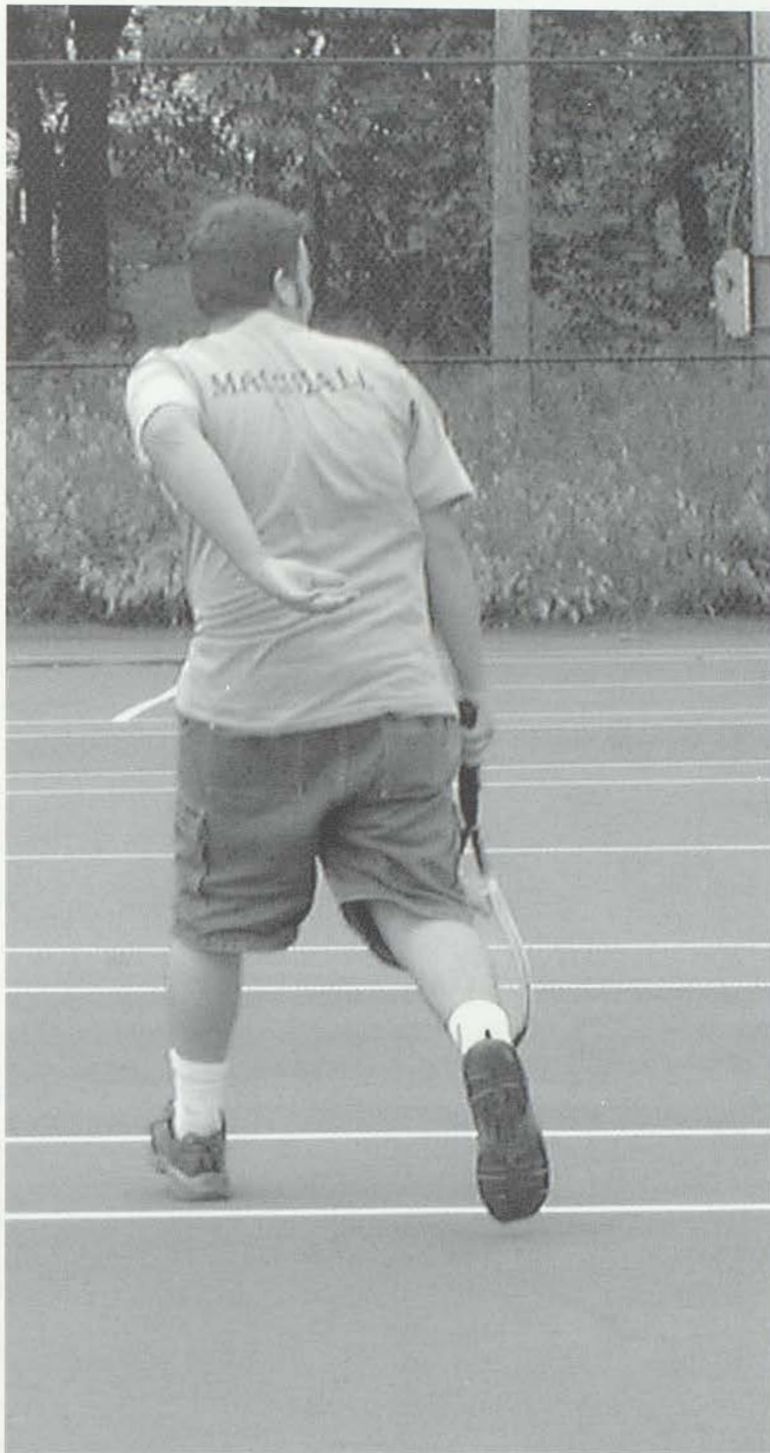

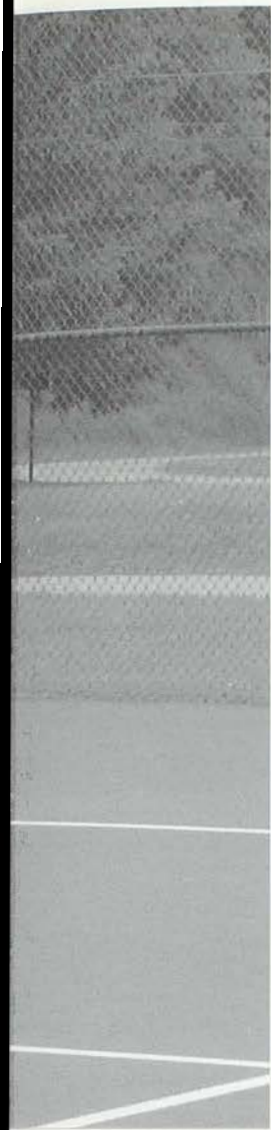

"We had a good season for having such a young team, but next year varsity will have some very good junior players," Coach Jody Foreman said.

"Practice helped me a lot more this year than last. I think it is probably because I tried," sophomore Seth Burger said.

Warm Ups Stretching out and warming up before his match is sophomore Brad Phillips. "I always warm up my serve before a match because I think it helps," Phillips said.

I've Got it Going for the green fuzzy ball is sophomore Paul Ousley. Paul was first doubles and team captain. "I was going for the ball for a win, and I think we won that game too," Ousley said.

Uhhh... After hitting the ball back over the net, freshman Craig Thomas awaits its return. "I like tennis, and my whole family plays it, so it gives us something to bond about," Thomas said.

Ok, Here's How We'll Beat Them Giving his team a pep talk is sophomore Paul Ousley. "I like to give my team a good talk before the match. I think it helps them with their game," Ousley said.

Throw to Third! Waiting for a throw from her teammate on first base is sophomore Tonya Doolittle. "I tried to stop the girl from getting onto third base, but I didn't get the ball in time," Doolittle said.

Diamonds Are a Girl's Best Friend

With the loss of 3 teammates during the season and a poor record, the girls varsity softball team is in a shabby position, right? Nope. Some of the teammates wouldn't exactly agree with that statement. "We have a better attitude than last year, but our performances aren't as good," senior third baseman Cindy Moore said. At the beginning of the season, senior pitcher Stephanie Minniear was sidelined with an injury, and 2 players left the team. This meant that there were some positions to fill. Sophomore Ali Wills joined varsity from jv on May 11 in their game against Portage Central. She was put on first base. "Varsity is much more extreme than jv was," Wills said. "It's faster paced...more intense." As anyone knows pressure makes for a higher quality gem.

Aiming for home with sparkling attitudes.

Get to 1st... Getting the job done is sophomore Sarah DeGraw. "I was starting to run to first. I only got one single in that game," DeGraw said.

Stepping Up To the Plate

and Keeping Their Spirit Intact.

The jv softball season was a very challenging one with a record of only 2-20. Due to injuries on the varsity team, many of the jv players were moved up to varsity. With only twelve members left on the jv team, the pressure of getting better was upon them. Some of the plays became harder as the season went on and the tough times became more abundant.

"We had our tough times, then again, we had our shining moments. Through it all, though, I think we learned and improved," freshman Amanda Segar said.

Though there were some bad moments, some knew there would be one great one.

"At first, someone would make a horrible play, but then the unexpected would happen. Someone would make a play that amazed us all, and we would jump for joy, a little," freshman Meagan Mackey said.

The challenges being high, jv softball kept the spirit high.

The right mind set... With a mind for the game Sophomore Megan Bailey runs for the base. "My mind was on getting to that base before the ball did," Bailey said.

Eye on the Ball... Keeping the form and positive mind is freshman Stephanie Stockel. "When I get up to the plate, I concentrate on hitting the ball not where it is going," Stockel said.

Slide in... Working on sliding skills is sophomore Angie Sommers. "All I wanted right then was to get that point. We needed it," Sommers said.

Break Time Taking some time to rest between innings are junior Zach Langford and senior Mike Sayles. "Zach and I were talking about how slow the pitcher was really throwing those fastballs," Sayles said.

Aim...Fire Throwing the ball around to warm up for the game is senior Andrew Dillon. "When I warm up for a game, I get really nervous, but then I think about how good I am going to do, and then I stop being nervous," Dillon said.

Who's on Third? Waiting on third base for a ball to be hit in his direction is senior Greg Wicklund. "I liked being close to the stands, even though we never had any fans," Wicklund said.

Taking a Seat After their game against Lakeshore, the team gets a pep talk from their coaches. "We lived the dream, and took it to the limit. We are hardcore baseball players, and we need hardcore coaches," junior Zach Langford said.

Winding up Showing the way to properly throw a baseball is senior captain Will Hagerty. "Being the pitcher gives you a sense of power. You are the field general out there," Hagerty said.

We Won't Show Weakness

Baseball is a sport that takes concentration and ability. One minor mistake and it could change the outcome of the game.

"At the beginning of the season our team didn't work together, so we lost a bunch of games. We are finally pulling together and winning some games," freshman Evan Sharply said.

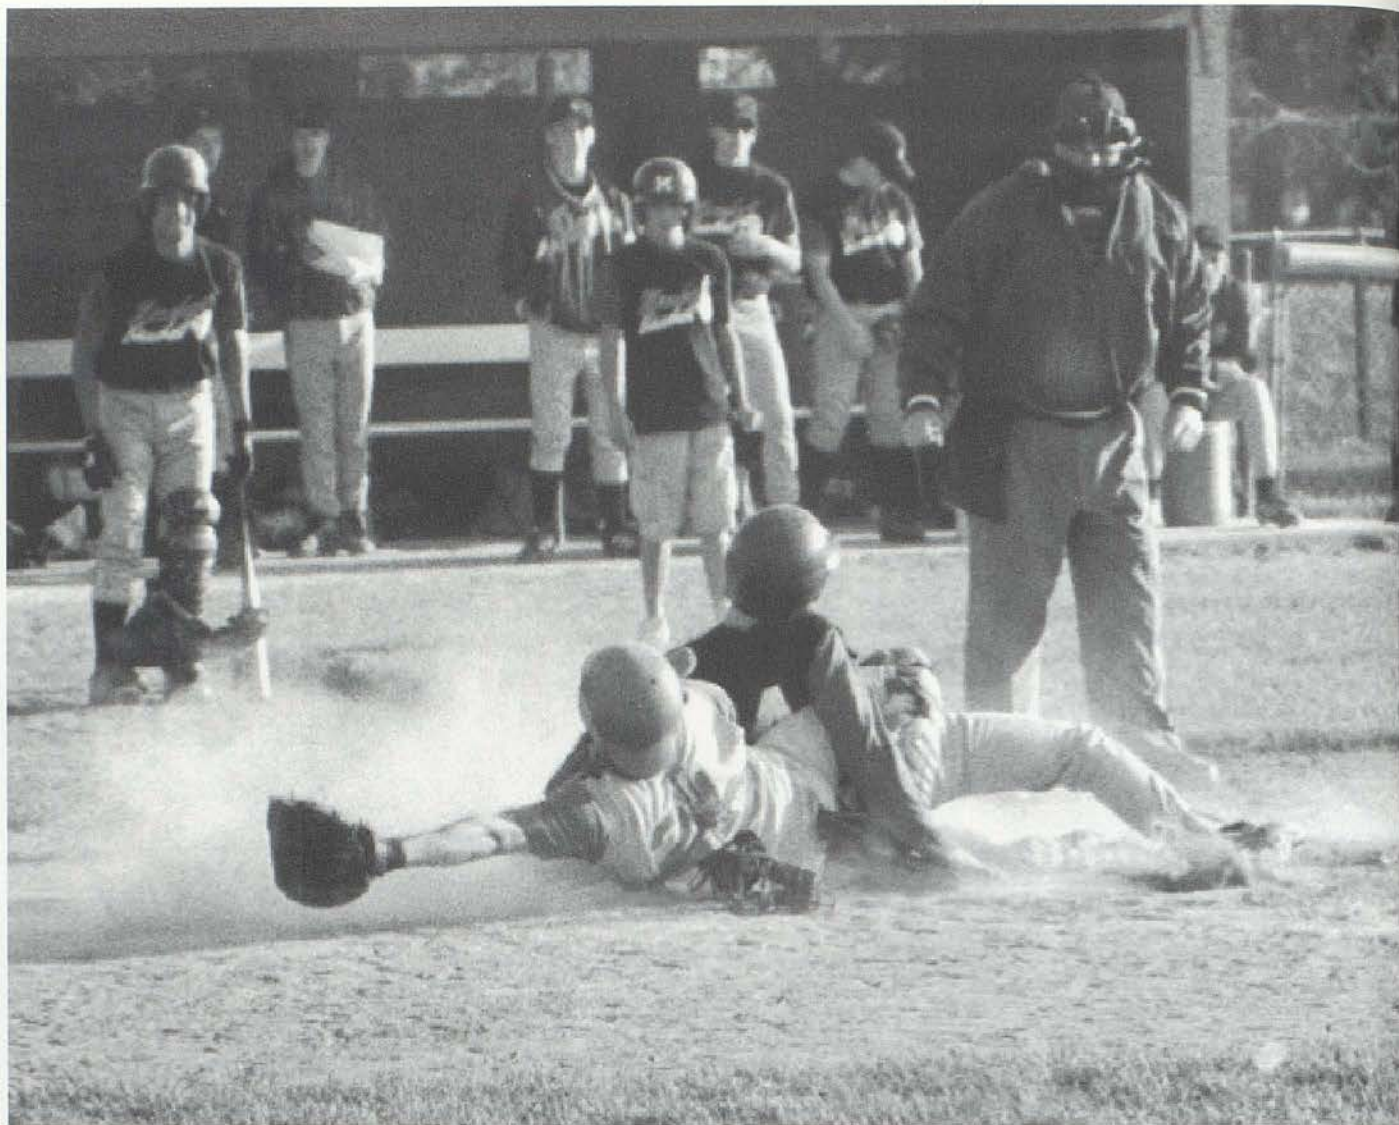

The team had a 16-10 season year and was hoping for a district win.

"Overall our season is a little disappointing. We finished third in our division. We lost some real close games to Sturgis and Coldwater who went on to win the division. Right now we have two games left until districts. Hopefully, we can win like we did last year. Overall, though, our season has been better than last year. Our record is eleven and nine," coach Tiece said.

Ending the season without the district win the team still had a great season.

Baseball is more than 14 guys swinging bats, catching balls, and running bases.

Baseball or Bowling?

Taking out his opponent is junior Ian Loughrige. "It was a close play at home, and I didn't have any room to slide, so I knocked the Harper Creek catcher on his butt and got thrown out of the game for it," Loughrige said.

Getting in the Swing of Things

Stepping up to the plate for an exciting season

"We thought we were good enough to win a lot of games," sophomore Matt Freds said. The jv baseball team ended with a record of 15 wins and 10 losses. The team got into a hitting slump early in the year and struggled in some games. After a while they began to catch fire and set their goals higher. "As a team I would like to finish the season over .500, and individually I'd like to work hard and start hitting better," junior captain Nick Zuehkle said. "We got down on ourselves and we wouldn't get pumped up to play. However, we started to pull together as a team, and won our next seven or eight games. Hopefully, this season will prepare us for the next level," Freds said. Also in action were the freshmen boys. They struggled most of the year, but had some exciting victories despite those struggles. "We didn't have as good of a record as I hoped, but we did have fun," freshman Doran Seibert said.

Fire Power Tossing a pitch right down the middle for a strike is sophomore Jon Powers. "My arm is like a rifle, and I definitely bring the heat on every one of my pitches," Powers said.

Team Unity Meeting to talk about the pitches are sophomores Jon Powers and Trent LaFountain. "The catcher and the pitcher have to have a good unity. Our whole team gets along really well," LaFountain said.

Oh, I Guess I'd Better Run Running to first base after crushing a single to the left field fence is junior Collin Hoffmann. "It's important to hustle every play. You never know what's going to happen," Hoffmann said.

And... They're Off
 Competing in a distance race is sophomore Beverly Twiss. "My solo season this year was below my standards, but I ran much better with my squirrel gun (baton) in my hands," Twiss said.

Up, Up, and Away Clearing the bar while pole vaulting is sophomore Molly Hazel. "I actually thought I had a really good season, and I had fun doing it this year," Hazel said.

The Fast and the Feminine

As the lady runners made strides to the finish line, they also made strides past their scores from the previous year. Many of the girls improved personal records.

"I improved my record by twelve seconds in the 800. It was really cool, and I've decided that I'm going to state next year," freshman Amber Murphy said.

While individual records were being broken, the team as a whole was also improving records.

"As a whole, I think we improved a lot and did a lot better than we did last year. I think we're all looking forward to a great season next year," sophomore Lauren Fletcher said. On their own and as a team, the lady track team continues to improve and prepare for next year's season.

Gingerbread Man

Running like the gingerbread man in the 110m hurdles is senior Jon Ziskal. "I don't think when I race. I just take it one hurdle at a time and hope to be at the front in the end," Ziskal said.

Clear the Way

This group of guys are running, jumping, and throwing their way to a division title.

Making it all the way to achieving co-champs in regionals, the guys track team had an awesome season.

"My 400m relay team did extremely well this year. Qualifying for state at regionals was an exciting experience" sophomore Brandon Beattie said.

The guys track team also beat Harper Creek this season. This was a major win because it was not expected.

Another major accomplishment made by the guys track team was the relay team of senior Phil Baranowski, sophomore Nate Hughes, sophomore Alex Hamil, and sophomore Eban Mackey beat the school record for the the 3200m relay.

Pushing the Limits Pushing himself in the mile is junior Josh Deno. "Meets like regionals are where all the hard work pays off," Deno said.

Keepin' Pace Running the 3200m relay is senior Phill Baranowski. "Our 3200m relay team was really good this year. We worked hard. Our handoffs were on, and we ended up making it to state," Baranowski said.

Cannon Ball Jumping over the high jump is junior Jimmy Biggs. "Track turned out to be a lot better than I thought that it would be. I ended up doing really well," Biggs said.

TIMBER! Falling to the mat after clearing the pole in the vault is junior Ben Taylor. "Drive it. Ride it. That's my philosophy," Taylor said.

Eyes on the Ball Practicing at the Marshall Country Club for the state tournament at Michigan State University is junior Alex Guerra. "I was hitting the ball onto a difficult green," Guerra said.

Perfect Extension Picking up their balls during a practice round at Marshall Country Club are sophomores Megan Williams and Kathryn Kennedy. "Wait, am I on the golf course? Whoops...Gotta brush up on my techniques sometime during the golf season. Megan est la fille bête!" Kennedy said.

Destroying the Evidence Raking up her foot prints after a sand shot at Marshall Country Club is sophomore Megan Williams. "I've gotten really good at raking sandtraps this year," Williams said.

A Hole [Team] in One

This year the girls golf team placed 3rd in regionals and 7th in state. Sophomore Kathryn Kennedy placed 2nd in the individual portion of regionals with a low of 84 and 5th in state.

Every year, the team has the chance to travel to Traverse City to play in a two-day tournament with other Michigan high school golf teams.

"I had fun at Traverse City, and it was a really nice course," sophomore Megan Williams said. Sophomores Kathryn Kennedy and Megan Williams, juniors Amanda London, Alex Guerra, and Katie Reid, and senior Anna-Kaisa Vourinen traveled to Michigan State University to compete in the State Tournament. "I did well at State; I got an 83 and an 87," sophomore Kathryn Kennedy said. With exceptional individual and group efforts, these girls showed that they could "be the ball."

May I See Your ID

How do you show your identity? Some say it in the clothes they wear. "Personality, a real definer of who people are.

I just happen to bring it out in my clothes," freshman Meghan Burr said wearing blue shoes, blue tights, orange capri pants, green shirt, and a pink bandana on her head.

Some think their identity is made by the people they know. "Identity is made by the people they hang out with, and the way they act around others," junior Dan Surls said. Some think identity is defined by the music they listen to. "Sometimes our own feelings and thoughts can be expressed better through the music we listen to. The music I pick out at any given moment is often descriptive of how I'm feeling at that time," senior Claire Nichols said.

What's Mine is Yours Layering on clothes are seniors Greg Wicklund and Matt Bailey. "We were doing a fun game in Spanish class. Matt was putting on some cool clothes. I thought it was a pretty happenin' outfit," Wicklund said.

Tangent, Cosine, Sine Working hard in geometry are sophomores Mallory Feeney and Melissa Edlund. "We were having fun in geometry even though we were often interrupted by Treice's Talks," Edlund said.

Nothing like a cake in the face For freshman Katie Risnes' 14th birthday, freshman Emily Scars got her a cake, right in her face. "Emily threw cake in my face. I was passing it out, and she wanted a 14 x 14 peice of cake because it was my fourteenth birthday. She even made me measure it. Then she smashed it in my face," Risnes said.

Hat's On During the cold winter months, juniors Kealey Cottrell and Justin Vanderburg go skiing. "I'm going skiing because I don't like your face. From Carl with love," Vanderburg said. "I like skiing. I think it's very fun. Justin is my friend," Cottrell said.

"Adjusting to a new school has its ups and downs, but there are definitely more ups than downs. I enjoy my job as a teacher here," Williams said.

The ABC's of CPR Observing a student during the CPR test is aquatic and social studies teacher Mr. Hamlin. "Teaching the skills and techniques of CPR is important because it could save someone's life. I feel fortunate to be able to help," Hamlin said.

They Say the Older the Wiser

The faculty continues to shape the students of today. Ninety adults over the age of twenty-three are seen in the classrooms and offices of the high school each day. They all have one thing in common: working to influence over eight hundred students that walk through the doors each morning.

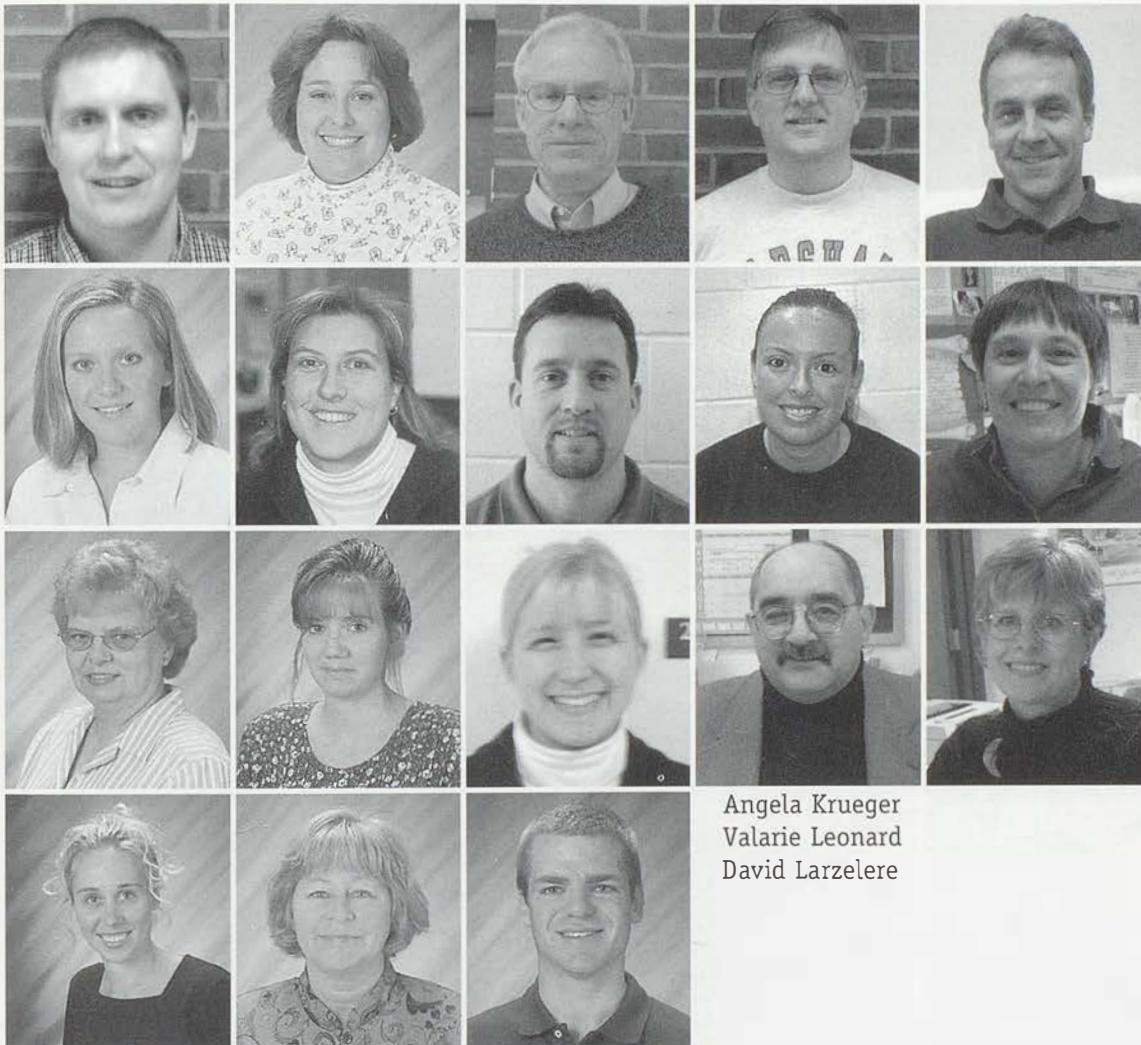

"I most hope that I have influenced students to believe in themselves and push themselves to think for themselves and be the most productive person they can be," social issues teacher Mr. Burns said.

Some teachers believe that relationships outside of the classroom are just as important as those that are built during class.

"Relationships outside of school have an influence on the opportunities that students have to learn," social studies teacher Mr. Coddens said.

With more than eight hundred students present, there is a lot of learning going on, which means that the influence that teachers have on their students is becoming more and more evident with every passing day.

A Daily Dosage of Good Work Working on daily paperwork in her office is guidance counselor Mrs. Hainline. "I enjoy working with students and helping them to discover careers to go into. My focus is to help students to develop leadership skills to use in the future," Hainline said.

2005 Ways to Be an Individual

"Newbie's" perspective on being original

Every weekday freshman hall fills with "newbies". They cram together in one big group as they tear through their lockers in search of their belongings.

This new environment can be a scary place for some freshmen. "I was nervous at first, but later I got more comfortable with the whole high school thing. I like the block scheduling, too," Nikki Kazmar said.

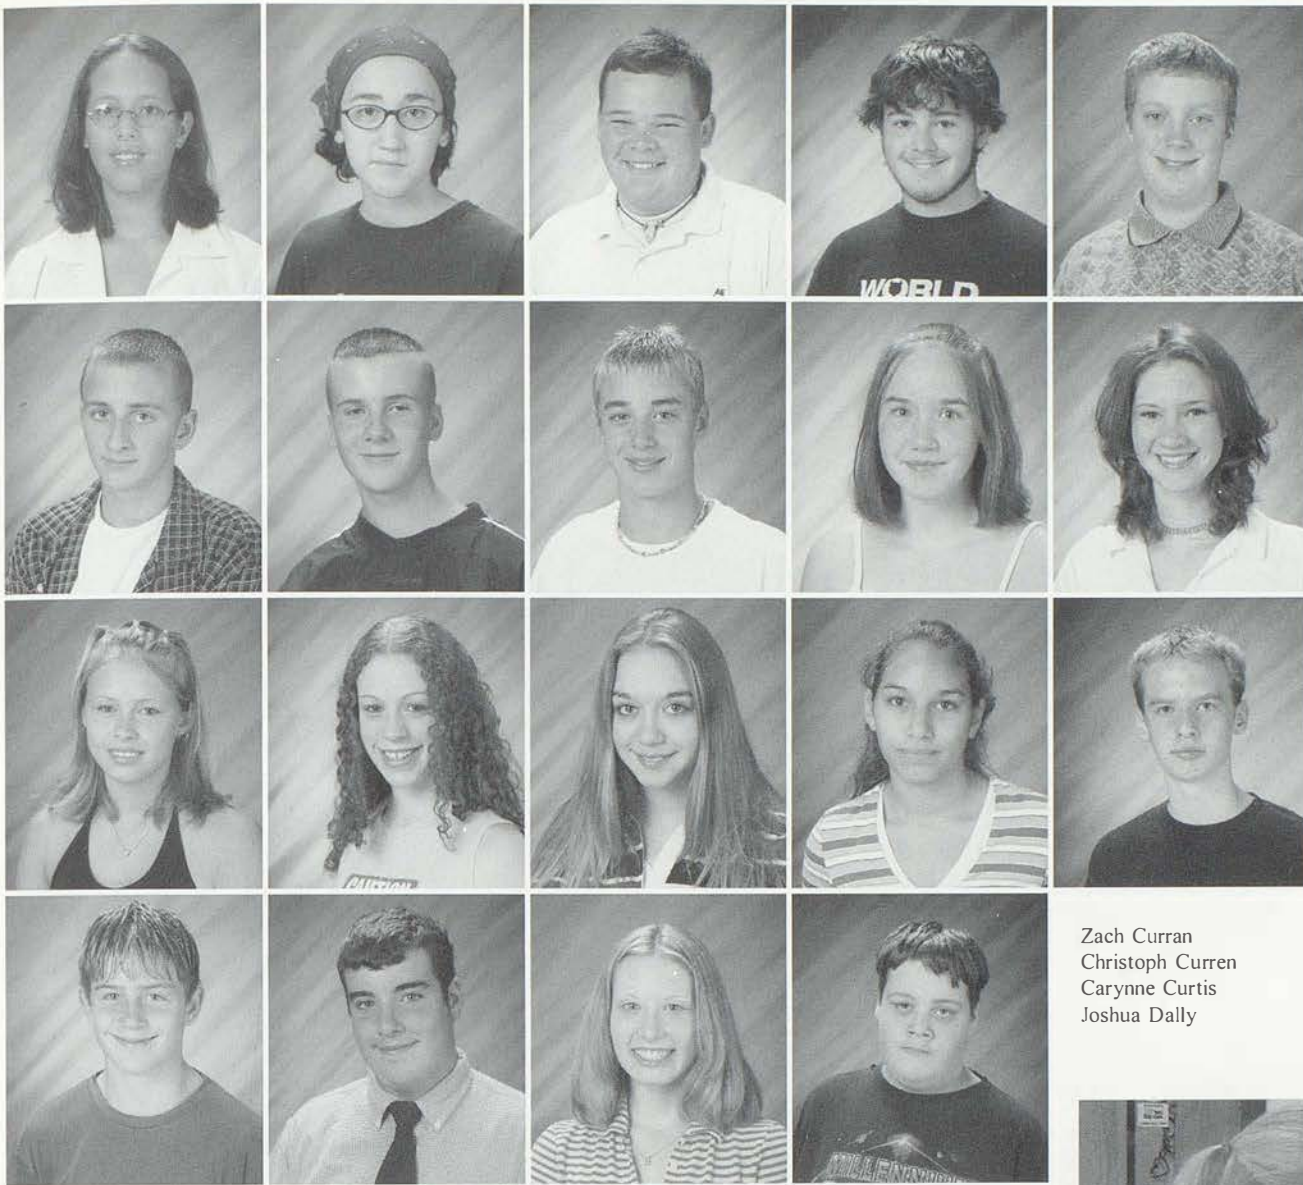

Some students feel a little more at ease in the different surrounding. "I wasn't really nervous at all. I didn't think anything of being in high school. I love it because of the bookstore and Mr. Burns though," Jenna Sopko said.

Upper classmen may identify the freshman as the "insignificant newbies". The fact is that each freshman has their own personal identity. Though they may not believe it, they all have a unique quality. "My unique quality is that I can burp abnormally loud," Lindsey Merkel said.

Being in high school can help shape students into who they will be in the future. Being in high school can also help students to find their originality, or unique qualities. "Being original is important because otherwise you are just a copy of something, and you can't find out who you really are, and who you will be in the future," Sarah Petrusis said.

Whether it is a bigger change or a smaller change, high school is a change, and the newbie's reactions to that is what also makes them unique.

Finally... It's Here "By the time B lunch comes, I'm really hungry. I was eating my eggs so that I have enough energy to get back to class," Lauren Murphy said. Murphy also uses her lunch period to talk to her friends Sheila Srinivasin and Carla Stevenson.

Read on... Reading a book in forensics class is Kelsey Travis. "I like to read books that have a good plot to them," Travis said.

Food Fight

Talking to her friends about up coming exams is Morgan Damron. "This year during lunch we actually threw more food than we ate because school food is not that good," Damron said.

Snap Crackle Pop Munching on a Rice Krispies Treat during lunch is Kara Evans. I was unusually hungry, so I opened my lunch that my mommy packed me to find my usual Rice Krispy Treat. I love Rice Krispy Treats because they are crunchy, sweet, and yummy in my tummy," Evans said.

Dancing Fool Dancing around and partying at Kate Grooms' house is Adam Jenks. "The guys were dancing and throwing the girls' headbands back and forth because it made them mad. We thought it was funny, though. They made really bad frisbees because they had too many holes in them," Jenks said.

Time Out Taking some time to read her book during seminar is Kaiße Grable. "For the people that use seminar wisly it is a probably a good class. I usually just get really bored," Grable said.

Wild and Crazy Showing off the cake from her 14th birthday party is Katie Risnes. "It was my fourteenth birthday. I had two huge cakes: one to play around with and one to eat. Emily Scears threw the cake in my face. Later I got cake in my face again," Risnes said.

Queen of the Court Getting ready to throw in the basketball after it went out of bounds during a freshman basketball game is Ashley Dominique. "Nobody was open, so I didn't know which way to throw the ball. I hate it when that happens!" Dominique said.

Driving Marshall Crazy

As Only First Year Drivers Can...

With a newly printed license and a shiny set of keys, many sophomores can finally say, "Yes... I drive."

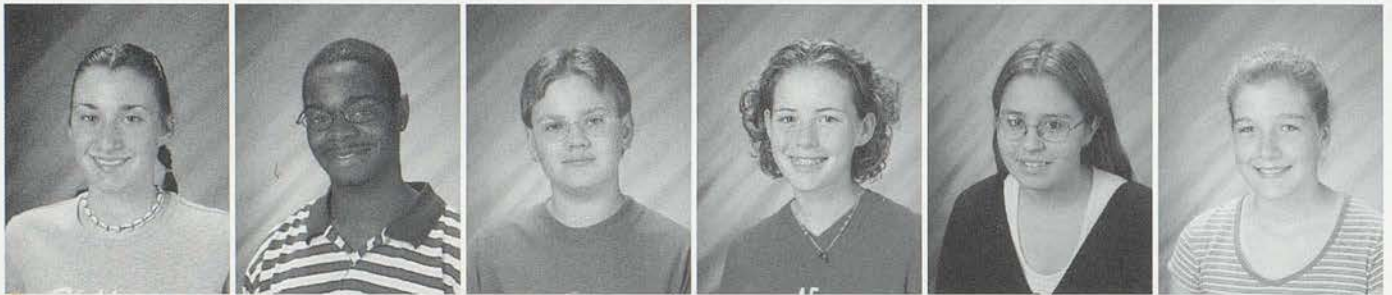

"I love cruising downtown, pickin up the honeys, chillin' and illin'...but I still miss the moped," Dustin Sayers said. Sophomores can agree on many reasons why they like driving, and many reasons why they do not.

"I like being able to go where I want, when I want. On the other hand, the scariest thing about driving is just the fact that girls are behind the wheel," Mitchell Robinson said. Some may not agree with the "girls" part, but most sophomores say they can relate to the great feeling of freedom that comes with a license.

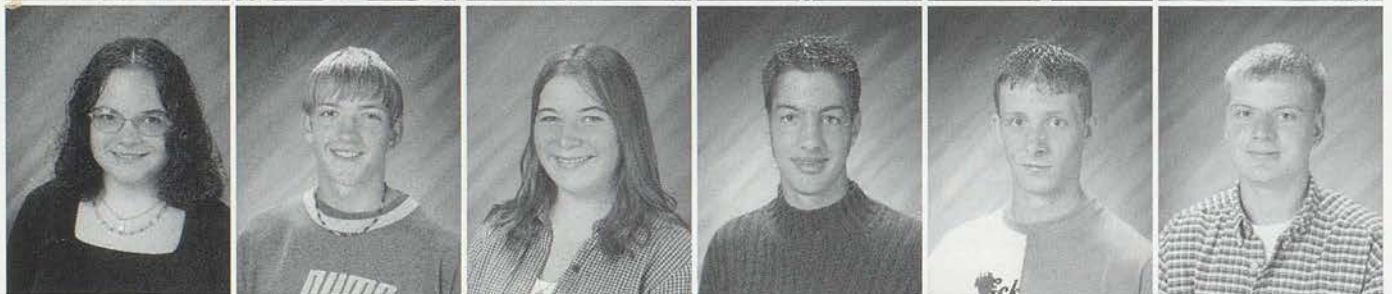

There can be disadvantages to having a license. "I miss asking cute guys for a lift," Melissa Edlund said, "but I'm glad that I don't have to find rides all the time now."

Sophomores are now able to drive themselves to school, to their jobs, or to even check out boys and girls throughout the Michigan Avenue strip. This life change allows them the freedoms they never had before.

Future Rulers With New Ideas

Counting the days until they inherit the school

As the end of the school year approaches, so does the beginning of the next. This year's juniors will be next year's seniors... a fact that is not often forgotten. "Once you're done with that [senior year]... it's over," junior Catrina Rome said.

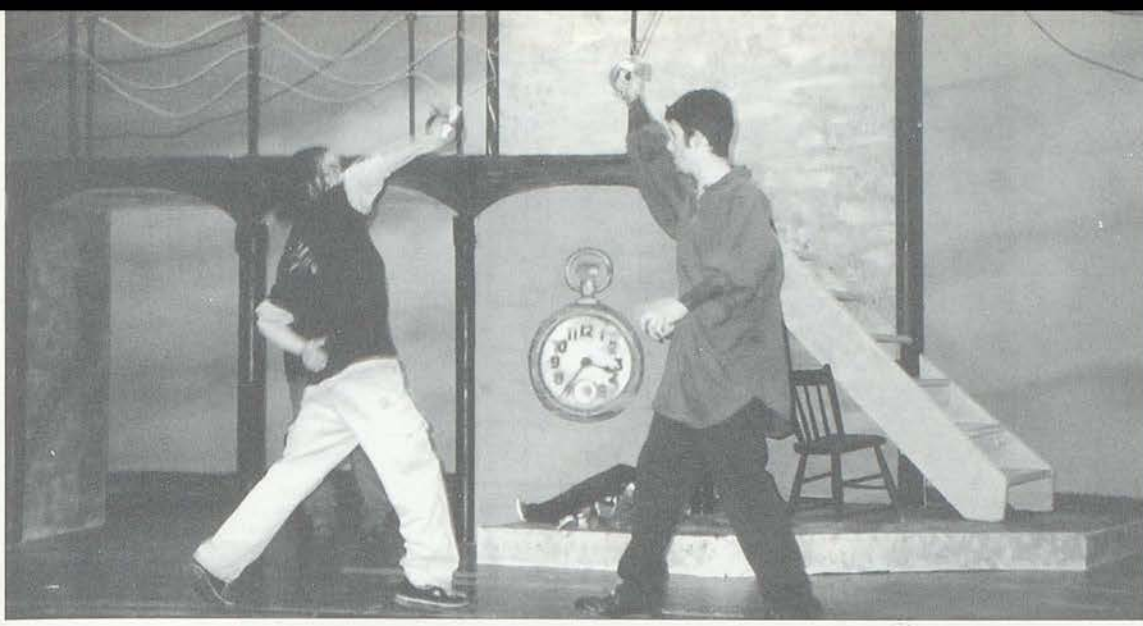

The counselors recommend that students begin preparing for college during their junior year. Some students might not think of college until they are already seniors, but many juniors are getting a head start now. "I took the ACT, and I've been looking into colleges. I've actually found a couple I might want to go to," junior Samantha Hughes said.

Before college, though, a student must first survive six marking periods of 12th-grade classes. Juniors have learned well from the mistakes of the senior classes before. "I'm taking a lot more hard classes [next year]. They'll make my application look good," Hughes said.

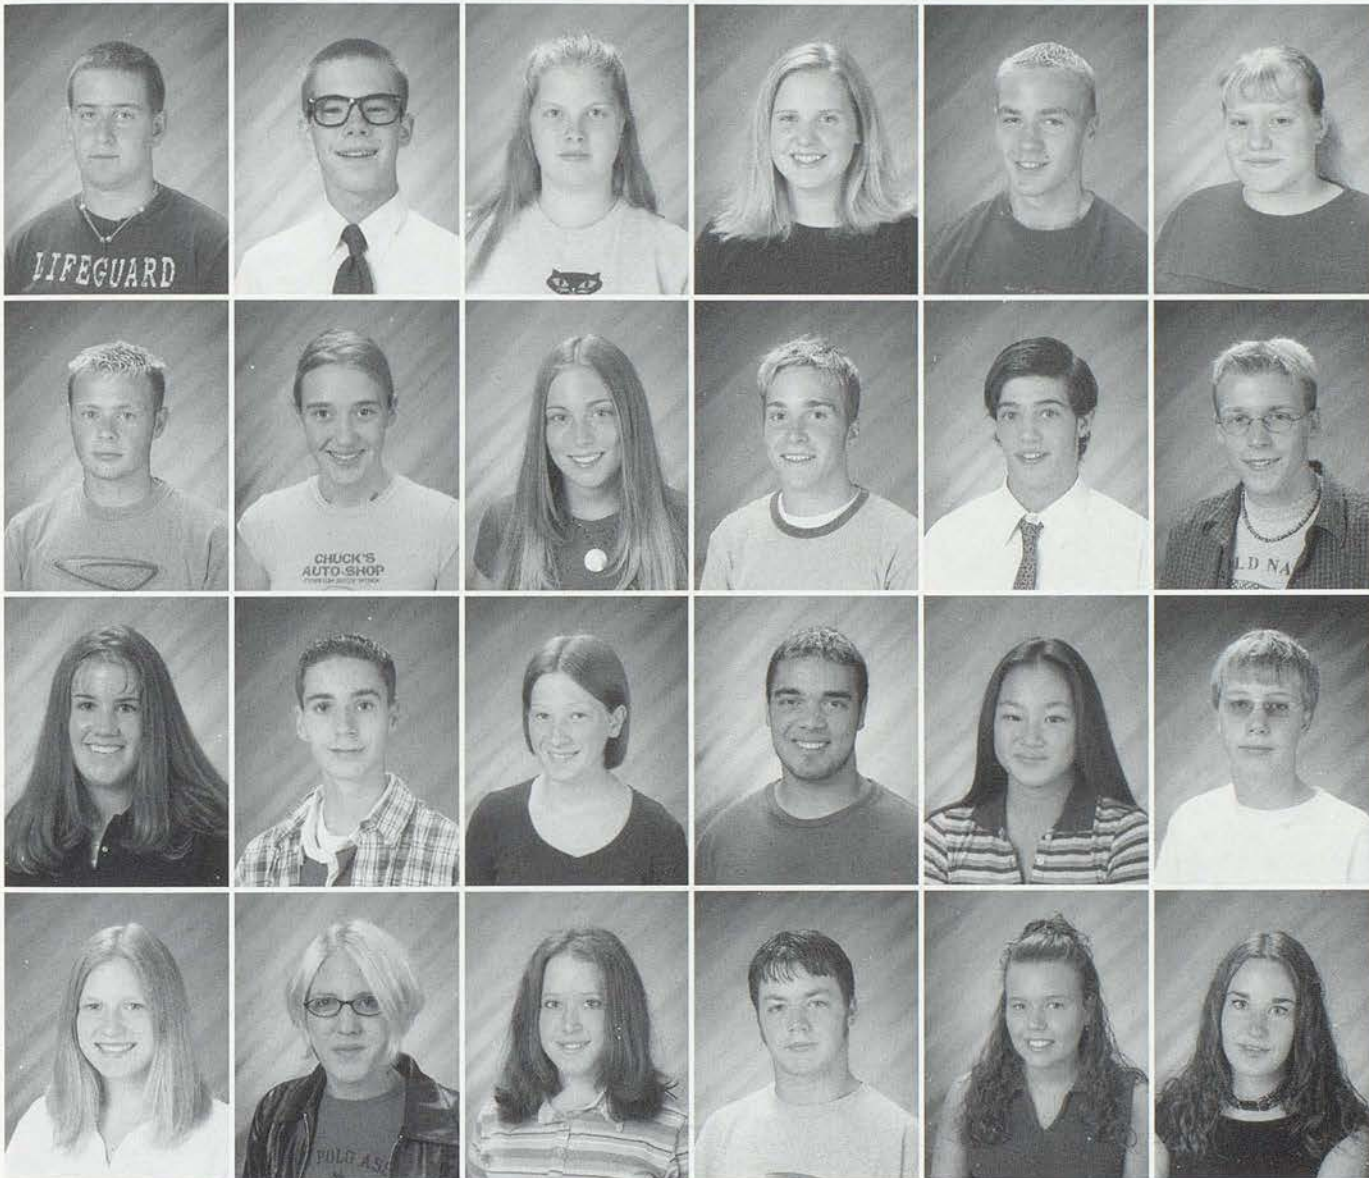

"I don't want to slack off in the fall. I won't get 'senioritis', and I won't take all easy classes," junior Laura Maher said.

The junior class -- the first grade known as an "upperclass" -- can be stressful and rewarding. "Without friends, it wouldn't be as good as it is," Rome said.

Put Thy Rapier Up! On the set of Romeo and Juliet, Antonio Barroso (left) and Josh Barner (right) practice their roles in Act III, Scene i. "Seeing as I was wearing leather pants and knee-high boots, I was surprisingly very comfortable wielding a sword on stage," Barroso said.

This Won't Hurt, I Promise Slipping on Cheryl Hedges' glove is senior Kelsey Schnaitman. The girls decided to share the gloves and each wear one on this special occasion. "The glove looked and fit so much better on me, because Cheryl has stubby, pretzel nugget fingers," Schnaitman said.

Now It's Over Strumming away on his guitar is senior Dan Boyer. "I had to practice my awesome Sugar Ray song for class night," Boyer said. "I think it took me a whole five seconds to learn. It was rough."

Fantastic Voyage Hitching a ride on the back of a car are seniors Claire Nichols and Katie Lange. They are dressed as cupids for Halloween. "We got tired of roller-blading. So, we decided to get pulled behind our friend's car. It was really fun until our feet got tangled and Katie fell down," Nichols said.

An Apple a Day

Simultaneously fighting off a trip to the doctor's office and enhancing her brain power by eating an apple and reading a short story out of her literature book is sophomore Katie Harlow. "I was reading about a girl who was really sick, and it made me think that I should eat an apple every day," Harlow said.

This Little Piggy... Disecting a fetal pig in anatomy is junior Susan Lambrix. "It was neat to see the parts we'd talked about all year up close and personal," Lambrix said.

I'm Ready For My Closeup

Gearing up for a presentation in theater on stage makeup is senior Tiffany Dean. "I get an extra boost of energy for my presentation from a daily breakfast bar," Dean said.

Bio-hazard Filling out a lab worksheet in biology is sophomore R.J Hamm. "Lab experiments are my favorite part of biology," Hamm said.

Pick an apple from the tree of knowledge

Much like Adam and Eve, students are choosing to pick apples from the tree of knowledge. The apples, or subjects, students pick shape their identity within the school and their future identity.

Whether they are math wizards, artsy-farts, or yearbook nerds, students' class choices make an impact on how others view them. "I have focused more on art. I think people see me as more creative because of this, but I don't think I am," junior Colleen

Pierce said. Other students have taken the opposite approach and concentrate on an all around education. "I think because I have concentrated on more core classes like English, Math, and Science, that people see me as more of an all around person," junior Ashley London said.

Some students are still undecided as to what they will concentrate on. "I really don't know what I want to do in high school. There are so many areas to pick from," freshman Katie Grable said. Whatever stage they are in, all students are pioneering their own unique academic identities.

WARNING! Contents Under Pressure During class, sophomore Beverly Twiss holds her head and thinks. "My head was filled to the top and overflowing, plus my thinking cap wasn't working," Twiss said.

Buddy System Scanning yearbook pictures are senior Megan Adams and sophomore Erin Skidmore. "Erin is my little cabbage patch kid, so she always sits on my lap," Adams said.

Aubrey McCauley
"Yearbook is an extremely frustrating class, but looking through the final product makes all the hard work worth it. Around deadline time my stress level goes through the roof because we have to correct everyone's papers before we send them in."

Shay Caron
"Yearbook is giving me motivation to stop procrastinating because I have to make the deadlines or I have no chance of completing my page. I get a warm feeling inside when I finish my page because I know that soon I will be seeing it in the finished yearbook."

Leading the Way
Working to help his fellow classmates by creating the layouts is senior Nick Zalewski. "That was one of the days that the computer was actually working," Zalewski said.

History in the Making

And it isn't as easy as its cracked up to be.

Recording the past may not be as easy as most people think it is. There are an enormous amount of rules that a yearbook student must keep in mind and follow. From being forbidden to editorialize, to following the rules of C.R.A.P. (Contrast, Repetition, Alignment, and Proximity), as well as theme, yearbook students are almost never officially "done". "It's pretty stressful with the stubborn computers and having them be so slow, along with trying to make the deadlines," sophomore Erin Skidmore said. "Yearbook students are definitely under-appreciated. Hard work and effort is put into the yearbooks, and we are being pushed to the limit constantly," senior Jonas Heirman said. "I never realized how demanding yearbook would be until our first deadline," senior Claire Nichols said. Yet in the end, yearbook is a great class to learn responsibility, reliability, and also teamwork for the future.

Bad Computer...Bad Helping Mrs. Long with her stubborn computer are freshmen Jessica Burmister and Amber Murphy. "The computer wasn't doing what we wanted it to do, but it was actually kinda funny because we were all getting so frustrated," Murphy said.

Livin' Digitally

From hand-waxed layouts to digital designs, the Smoke Signals team is advancing technique.

What some people may not know about Smoke Signals is the hard work and determination the staff members demonstrate. Each member must take on their own identity or role. There are numerous jobs to assume such as layout designers, digital photographers, photo scanners, editors, writers and people to distribute the paper. As the times have changed, so have the Smoke Signals. This year they have gone completely digital. Since the Smoke Signals must be self-sustaining, the staff members must sell ads, and they now charge 25 cents for each paper.

"This year it is a lot easier to accomplish our deadlines due to the new technology. But with the massive loss of staff members second semester, it is getting progressively harder," junior and co-editor Tony Barroso said.

The Smoke Signals now is a self-contained, 8 page paper.

"The new size of our layouts gives us more of a creative outlet," junior Necole Hopkins said.

Two Minds are Better Than One Working on interview questions are seniors Patrick Dyer and Wesley Schoenherr. Schoenherr attended a journalism conference in Detroit. "I enjoyed the conference, but I really enjoyed our meal in Greektown. We got flaming cheese. It was pretty cool," Schoenherr said.

The Best Part of Waking Up Sitting in second block and proof-reading his next story is junior and co-editor Tony Barroso. Next to him is one thing he holds close to his heart. "Mountain Dew Code Red is to journalism what steroids are to organized sports," Barroso said.

Hey, I've Got a Question Thinking of interview questions are junior Mathew Moss and sophomore Robert Bess. "I was helping Matt with some killer interview questions for the journalism conference he was going to that day," Bess said.

Robert Swanson, freshman
"I like being a member of the Smoke Signals team because it is fun, yet it is a challenge. I've learned how to interview people and be part of a newspaper staff. I think that I have gained a lot from this class so far," Swanson said.

Lauren Hyland, freshman
"I like being in the Smoke Signals because we don't have to worry about taking an exam at the end of the semester. The paper does take a lot of hard work and time, but it is fun to try to be creative in my articles," Hyland said.

Similar Points of View Thinking together are editors Crista Chapman and Elizabeth Foerster, both juniors. "I work well with Liz. We like to laugh about our authority over the rest of the staff. We work hard and it pays off, but it makes me kinda' tired," Chapman said.

Strangling The Air Strangling an invisible person in her skit is sophomore Laura Davis. "I like forensics because I love to become immersed in literature," Davis said. This was Davis's first year in forensics.

What's The News?

Practicing her broadcasting is junior Necole Hopkins. "I practice on average about 5 hours a week for broadcasting. It's a lot of fun," Hopkins said.

Becky Budesky, Freshman
"I enjoy the experience you get from competing and meeting people. I recommend it to people who like to hear themselves talk."

Seth Burger, Sophomore
"I was just in the class this year. I liked it because I didn't have to do a lot. I might compete next year. If I do, I will probably do storytelling."

Time to Study Studying hard is junior Krinn Hess. "I was studying for my prose speech. I study and practice on average 2 hours a week for the tournaments," Hess said.

Settling Issues One Word at a Time

With the gift of speech, these talented talkers take the stage.

Debate is the art of arguing. Students involved in a debate team take opposite stands on an issue that is chosen each year, this year it was weapons of mass destruction. After each team has presented their arguments, the judge gives their decision on who has won the debate. "I like competing because I meet a lot of different people who give me ideas for my speech," junior Krinn Hess said.

In forensics, students can choose from a variety of speech competitions including storytelling, dramatic interpretation, poetry, prose, multiple, duo, TV broadcasting, oratory, extemporaneous, impromptu, informative, and sales. "I like meeting other people and building friendships, and the fun and thrill of performing," sophomore Stella Tippin said.

This year the debate team went to districts and Sebastian Smith, Noah Kerr, and Necole Hopkins went to state for forensics. Hopkins won fifth place. Smith competed in prose 9-10, Kerr competed in extemp, and Necole competed in broadcasting.

Deep In Thought "Simple-minded Jeanne" is a French folk tale that sophomore Stella Tippin acted out in many forensics competitions. "I did this piece for story telling, and I made it to regionals," Tippin said.

Three Part Harmony

Woodwind, brass, and percussion sections spend countless hours blending their talents to create a sound all their own.

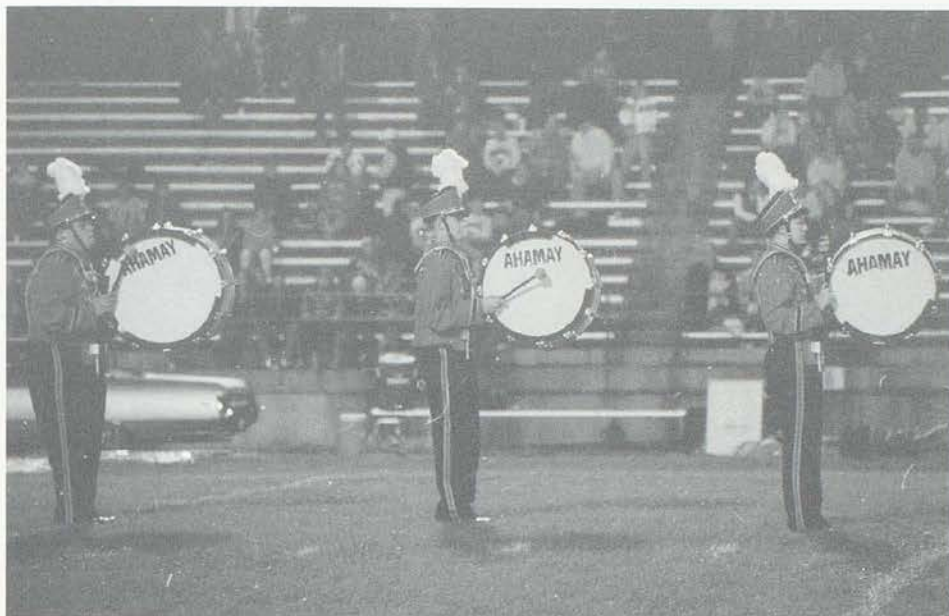

Throughout the year, band members can be found practicing steps in the teacher's parking lot, marching during halftime of numerous football games, and practicing their latest pieces during seminar and class. Members have many different reasons for putting in the extra effort. "Spending a lot of time practicing and rehearsing makes band different from all my other classes," sophomore Emily Conant said. "The effort is worth it for me because I want to be proud of the way we play." Others put in the extra time in hopes of high marks. "I want to know that we went to festival prepared," sophomore Noah Kerr said, "and to get good ratings." The band did score a division one rating at festival and advanced to state festival, which they haven't been to in 10 years, and recieved a division two rating. Band members put in extra time year round because they want to create something that they can be proud of. "We've worked hard," sophomore Megan Fitzpatrick said. "I think everyone would agree that it's been a successful year."

Left Foot, Right Foot Practicing steps in the parking lot are seniors Nate Powers, John Fear, and Cindy Moore, junior Keith Carver, and sophomore Mitch Jennings. "Marching season was fun but also long and tedious," Moore said.

Bells Up! Tooting their horns are the trumpet players junior Randy Sims and freshmen Kipp Caron and Lindsey Merkle. "The best part of band is emptying my spit valve on the people around me," Merkle said.

Marching to the Beat of Their Own Drum

Playing the drums during the halftime show are sophomores Becca DeGraw and Hannah Robbins, and freshman Joe Caron. "I like marching season because I don't otherwise get to play the drums," Robbins said.

Tom Stefan

"Band is challenging but also a lot of fun. I love making music, and it allows me to spend time with my friends."

Eva Vaughn

"My favorite part of band is marching season because we get to show everyone all the work we've done during half-time. It's neat to represent our school that way and, of course, we get to wear such cute outfits."

A Balanced Duet Making music during sectionals are sophomore Sara Potter and junior Alice Cavinder. "It's nice to have a stand partner to fill you in when you've been gone and also to crack jokes with when things get boring," Potter said.

How Does My A-String Sound? Assisting in the tuning process is senior Ryan Ours, who plays an "A" for the orchestra to compare their strings to. "Being concert master was a learning experience. Not only did it teach me something, but I hope I taught everyone else something," Ours said.

Divide and Conquer

Ready to play during viola sectionals are sophomore Shalini Thakur and freshman Kate Grable. "I don't enjoy sectionals all that much, but they are helpful," Grable said.

Anna Doud, sophomore
 "I liked the big, shiny bass because it was unique. I also liked the lowness of it. It didn't squawk."

Justin Vanderberg, junior
 "[I chose the violin because] my mom played violin, so it's sort of a family tradition."

Ready, Able, and Willing

Violins in hand, juniors Laura Howland and Justin Vanderberg watch the conductor.

"Music is very important in education. It broadens my horizons, and I enjoy it," Vanderberg said.

Resonate in Harmony

Each instrument adds its own piece to the musical puzzle.

"I think learning music is important, and my parents suggested I take orchestra," sophomore Shalini Thakur said. The orchestra class intends to teach just that. Under the guidance of Ms. Silvia Sidorane, a group made up of 24 high-schoolers -- some of whom had been in orchestra for up to four years before high school -- plays a variety of classical and recent tunes.

The orchestra plays in many concerts throughout the school year, often with the assistance of the band. One notable concert is held every year during the Christmas season. Such songs as "Sleigh Ride" and "Christmas Medley" are staples at this concert. "My favorite [concert] is the Christmas concert. It's a fun atmosphere with everyone there," sophomore Anna Doud said.

Near the end of this year, the school board has considered dropping orchestra to save money, an unpopular idea with orchestra students. "It makes me very angry. ... Everyone needs music," freshman Kate Grable said.

Size Does Matter Showing a group of preschoolers the difference between violins and violas is senior Elise Grantier. "The preschoolers were fun. And they were cute. Very cute," Grantier said.

Four Groups ...One Song

Singing their way through competition.

Four different groups all perform in many different concerts including the Pops concert, the pre-festival concert, the winter concert, and the Rose concert in the spring.

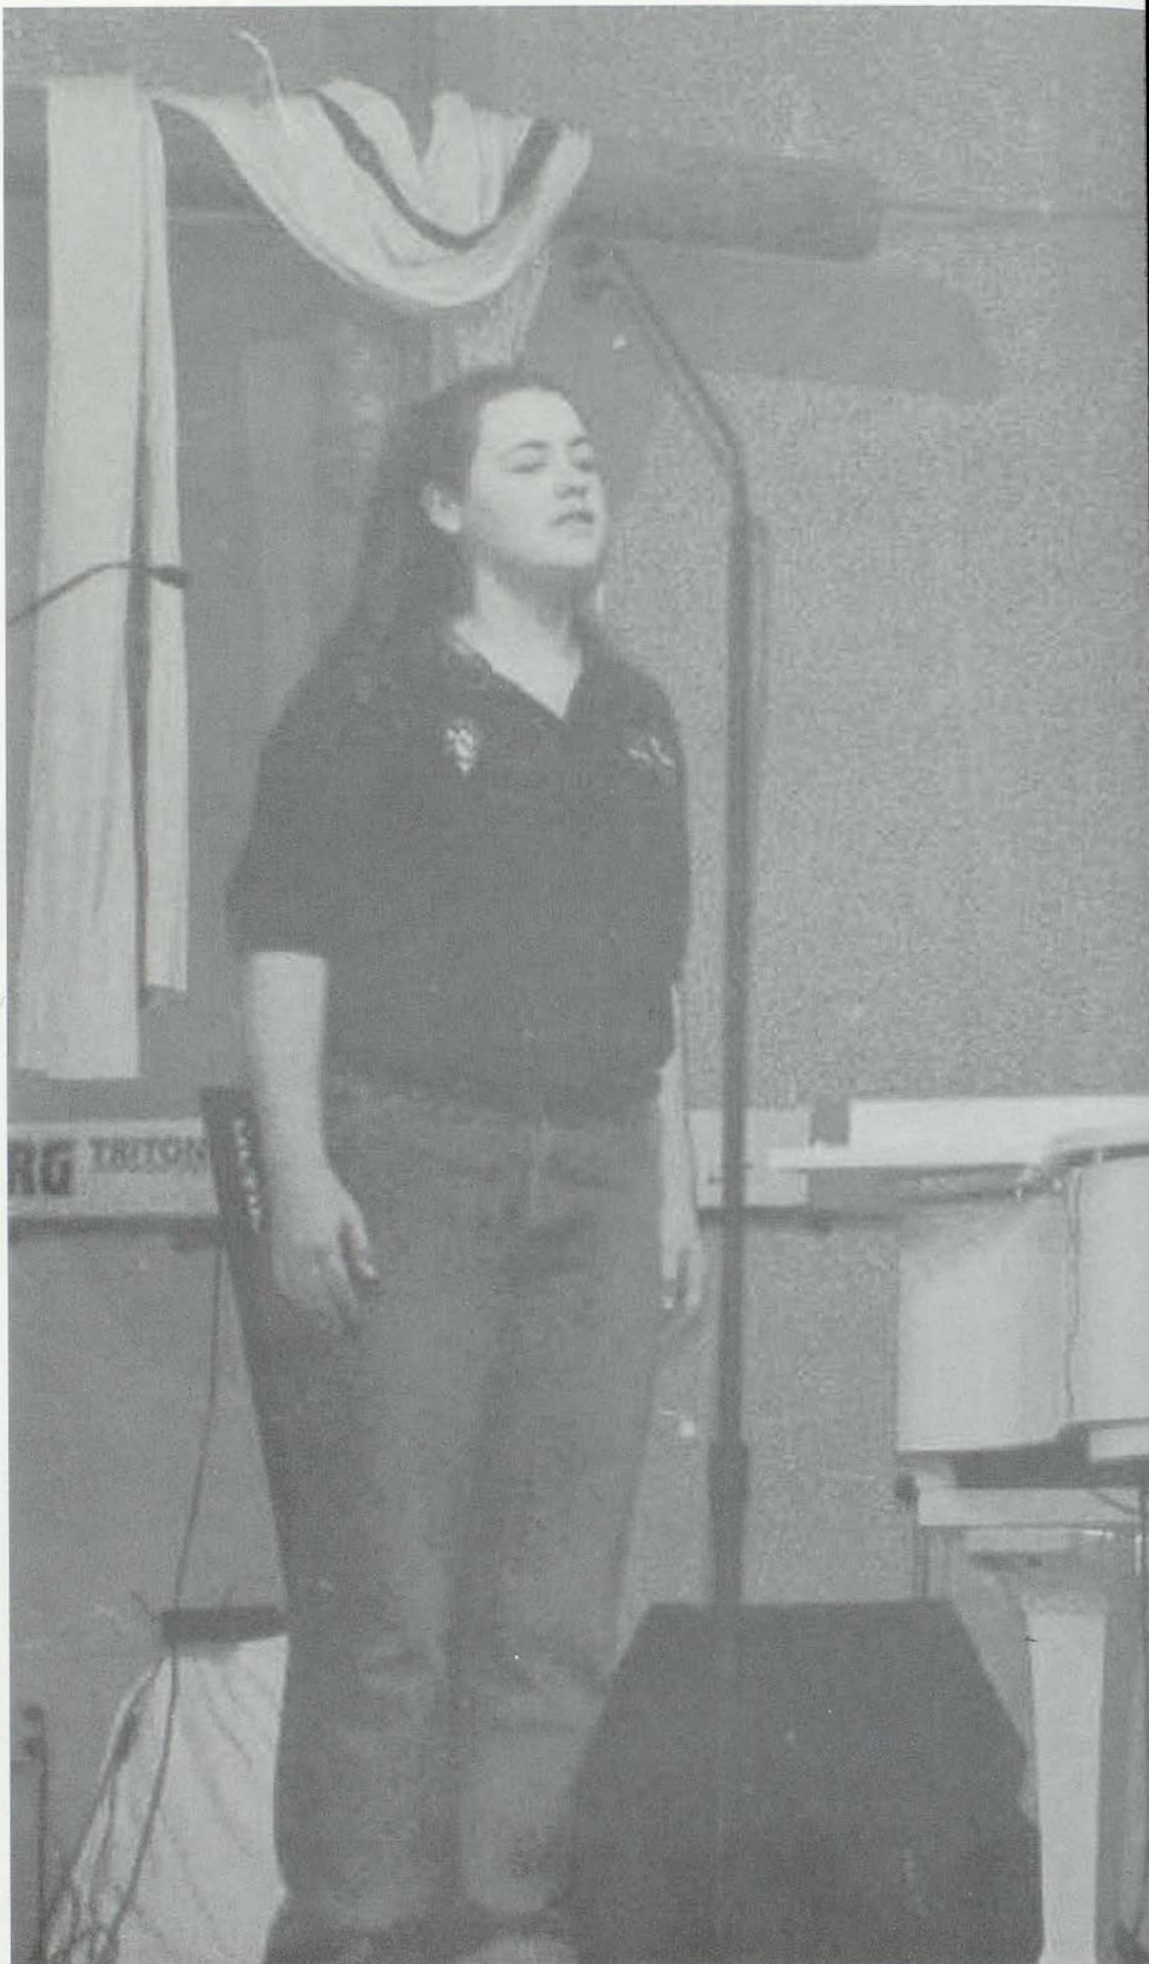

"My favorite concert was probably the Pops concert in the beginning of the year," freshman Vanessa Banister from Women's Ensemble said. "It was just a fun concert to start off the year. There wasn't any pressure. It was also a chance for the singers to do what they wanted individually."

At the Pops concert, the different choirs performed many different types of songs. Women's Ensemble performed the song "Raining on Prom Night," and the Marshall Singers performed songs which included "Mighty Mouse" and "Steam Heat".

Women's Ensemble and Marshall Singers also went to the State Festival and the Smoky Mountain Music Festival in Nashville, Tennessee this year. Women's Ensemble got first place in their division and Marshall Singers got second in their division in Tennessee, and both groups received straight ones at the State Festivals.

It's Raining on Prom Night Performing the number "Raining on Prom Night" at the Pops concert is the Women's Ensemble. Singing their duet are junior Krinn Hess and senior Kari Hamaker. "Kari and I had a lot of fun with our part in the song; it made people laugh," Hess said.

Spot Light Performing a solo at the Pops concert is sophomore Danielle Hayes from Mixed Chorus. "Singing is something I really enjoy doing," Hayes said.

Here I Come to Save the Day! Performing Mighty Mouse at the Pops concert are the Marshall Singers. On the stage are sophomores Casey Eash and Josh DeJong, and seniors Billy Romano, Matt VanDerMuelen, and Nate Powers.

Hannah Robbins, sophomore
 "I'm in choir because I love to sing and I love being a part of the group. My favorite concert was in Galantburg, Tennessee. The trip was a good experience and we won a big trophy."

Jen Buttrick, junior
 "I'm in choir because I want to explore the depths of my musical talent. If I could change anything about choir this year I wouldn't. How everybody sang really worked well for the group."

Hat's Off! Singing and dancing at the Pops concert are the Marshall Singers. In the picture are junior Jessica Byrd, sophomores Josh DeJong and Casey Eash, junior Clint Edwards, senior Billy Romano, and juniors J.J. Nelson, Ken Sink, and Hope Garza. "I like performing; I like singing. I don't really like dancing that much. I guess you could call me a non-dancing inclined person," Edwards said.

A Different Perspective Standing on chairs or tables for a better view, Mr. Foreman's first block class watches a demonstration. "The representatives we had were really helpful when they came in. They really helped us make important decisions during the year," Justin Allmond said.

We're Doing Good This Week "I do the stocks about once a week because they're easy points and because they teach me about buying and selling stocks," Matt Thomas said.

We Rule the Econ World Using her royal brain is Emily Palik. "Econ with Foreman is the best class because we've got the econ queens in there, and me and Meredith Lazar pull out some ditties about the stocks and bonds," Palik said.

Now I Know I Studied This Taking advantage of the variety of the class is Amy Eaton. "Econ tests are like a box of chocolates, you never know what you're gonna get," Eaton said.

Here I Go Again Putting her graph up for the week is Sherry Sanderson. "The graphs we do show us how the stocks fluctuate each week," Sanderson said.

Acquiring a Business Sense

Figuring out how the economy works.

Before they leave high school, seniors are required to take economics. "In econ we learn about how the U.S. economy works with the stock market and with supply and demand," Brian Quilhot said. While studying about the different types of economy, the students participate in simulated companies; selling an item, competing to see whose company does the best job with their product. "It helped me decide and plan for when I'm going to be on my own," Shay Caron said. Another activity that students do while in econ are the student-run companies. Each econ class is their own student company; they pick an item and sell it to other students in the school and around the community. Some items sold this year were bottle openers, sweatshirts, towels, and keychain flashlights. Each week representatives from State Farm come into the classes to help the student companies sell their products. "While I've been in Econ I've decided that I want to invest in America so I can be financially well off," Quilhot said.

I Wish I Could Do This Forever Preparing a presentation on productivity is Jenna Hurd, "The presentations help me because they show us what Foreman's talking about if we don't understand," Hurd said.

What Language Do You Speak?

The Voices of the World Begin in the Classroom.

With all of the advances in modern technology and communication, foreign language skills have become a necessary tool to influence people all over the world.

"Knowing English as a second language has helped me communicate with people in my stay in America and, after I graduate, being involved in international business," senior and exchange student from Denmark Marie Skov said. "Learning Spanish will also help me relate to people when I travel around the world."

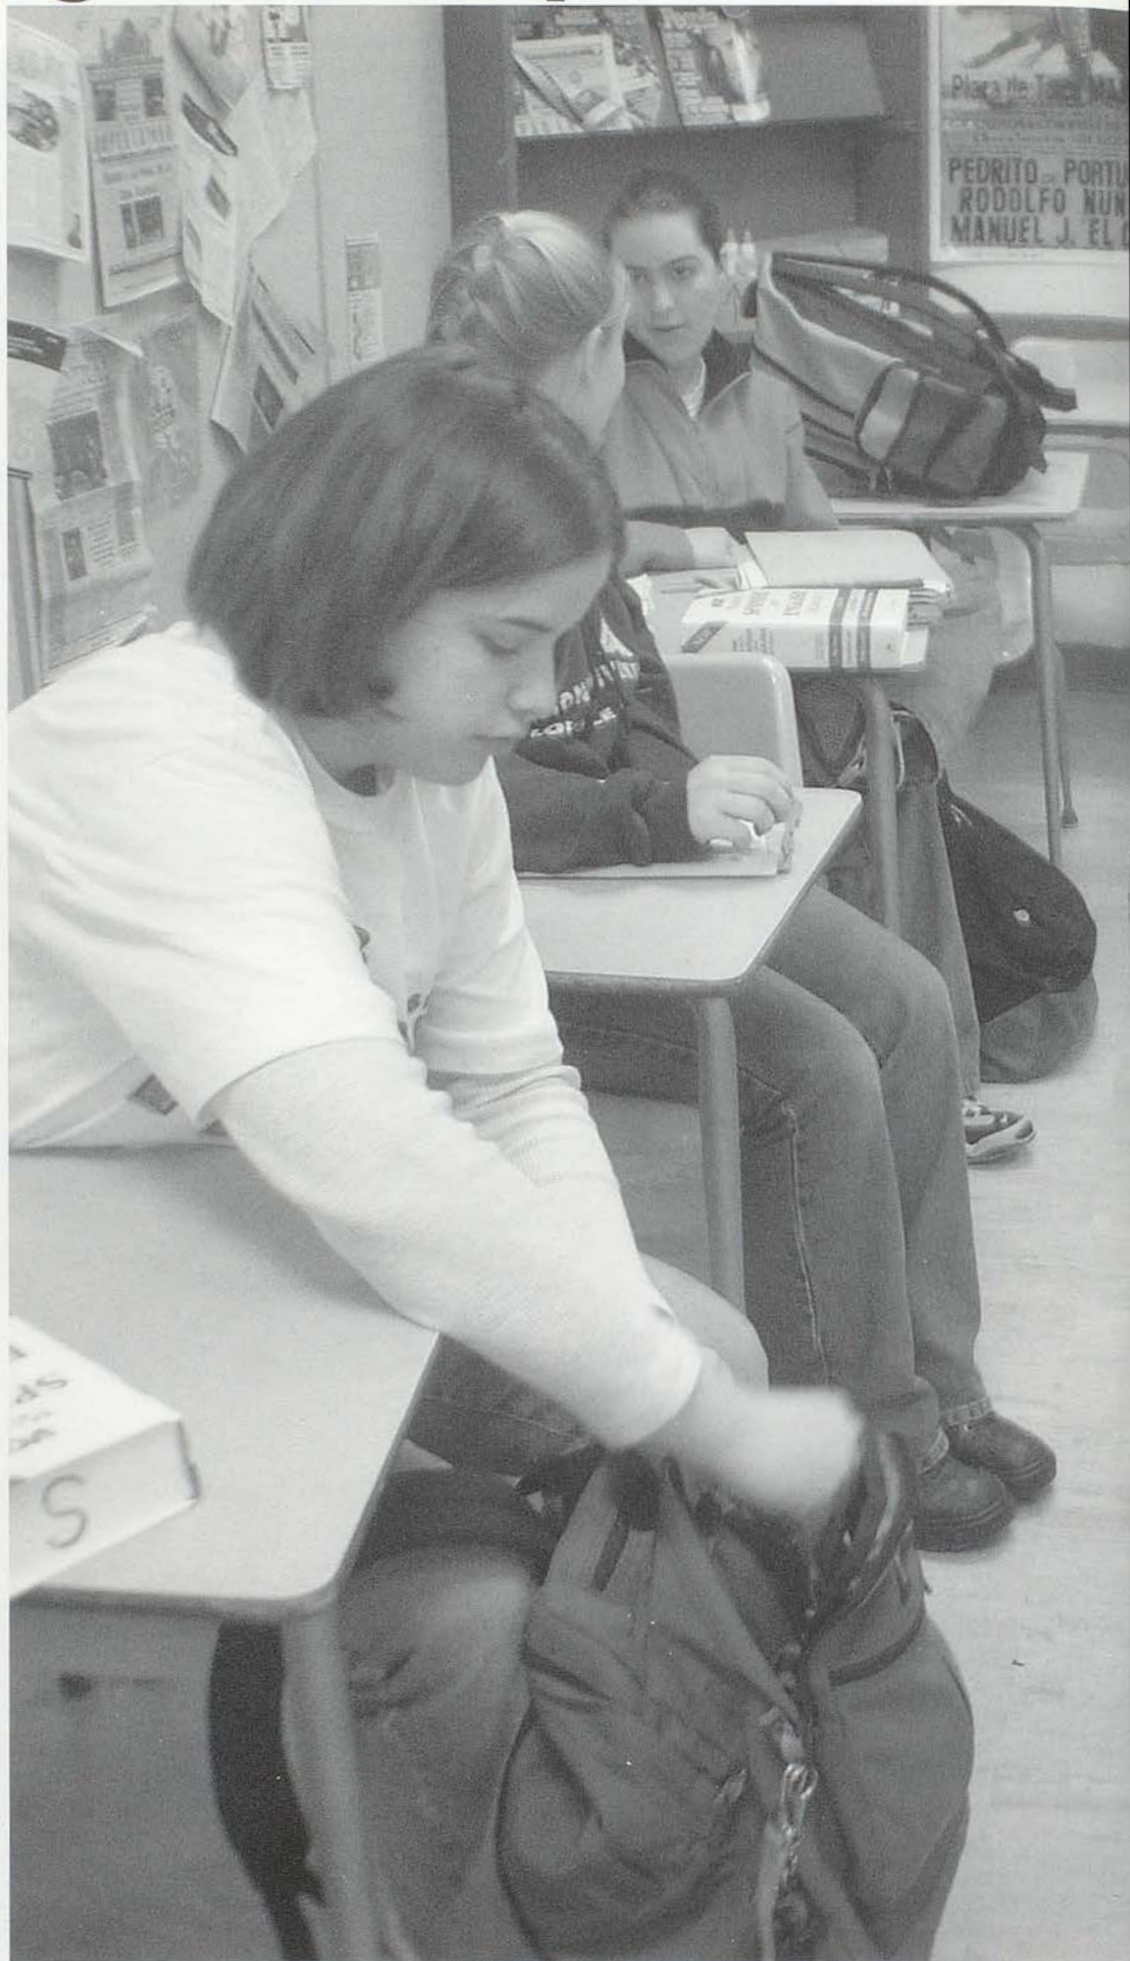

Other students feel learning a new language will be beneficial, even if they don't expect to leave the country. "Latin sounded like a good choice for me because I heard it helps people who are interested in going into a science," sophomore Megan Fitzpatrick said.

Students are offered up to four years of Spanish, French, or Latin.

"Regardless of which languages they choose, I think people will benefit from it later in life," sophomore Courtney Watters said.

Hard Work? Laughing is sophomore Laura Davis. "My favorite part of Latin is having Miss Magnus pronounce the verb endings," Davis said.

Dig In Opening her bag is freshman Marge Johnson. "Spanish is one of my favorite classes and with Mr. Delmotte, you have to make sure you're well prepared," Johnson said.

Parlez-vous Francais? Discovering French are sophomores Amy VanDerMeulen and Ali Wills. "The best thing about French is being able to learn it with my friends," VanDerMeulen said.

Carrie Schroeder
 "I decided to take French because everyone else seemed to be taking Spanish, and I wanted to try something different and interesting."

Ethan Gordon
 "I took Latin because I had no use for the other languages offered, and Latin is the base of all romantic languages."

Tutor Time In the back of Miss Magnus's classroom, sophomore Erin Lindsey instructs fellow student sophomore Angie Sommers in Latin grammar. "I was having trouble understanding the difference between the dative and accusative declensions," Sommers said.

Play Time Playing games on the internet after finishing his intro to infotech work is freshman Matt Sherrill. "Our free time was always the best part of class," Sherrill said.

Say What? Trying to figure out what Mr. Gibbs is talking about in retailing is junior Justin Hughes. "He was talking about something weird. That's ok, though, because the class is fun, and Gibby is the man," Hughes said.

L - A - Z - Y
"Accounting is great because I'm a lazy person, and this class is easy, and there is no homework," sophomore Chris Carlson said.

Speed Demon
"The best part about intro to infotech is that I am up to typing sixty words per minute, baby," sophomore Robert Bess said.

Shut Yo Mout' Enjoying her free time in intro to infotech by surfing the net is sophomore Becky Woods. "Intro to infotech was fun because I liked when we got free time, and Mr. Elyea stopped talking," Woods said.

The Keys to Today's World

Business skills may get a person a job--computers will make their job easier.

In today's world almost every job requires at least a little bit of computer skill. There are many classes offered through the high school that can help people learn and develop the skills needed to get and hold a good job. "I took intro to infotech because I knew I would need to learn how to type faster for future jobs and school," senior Beth Scherer said.

Some of the classes offered at the high school include intro to infotech, Microsoft networking, econ, retailing, accounting... the list goes on. "Retailing is fun. We take notes, watch movies, and do easy worksheets, but we also get to talk to friends," junior Phil Weare said. While some students like business classes, others prefer to stick with computer classes. "I like my computer class this year. It is a good break from the normal books and paper classes. We get a class where we can kind of explore and have more hands on activity," sophomore Ryan Fidler said.

"I'm excited about econ next year. It will be cool, and a good experience for my business filled future, considering that I'm going to be a rich sports agent," junior Jon Hammond said.

ObeyYourThirst Getting back to his classwork after taking a quick drink of his Coke is sophomore Bobby Slaughter. "My mouth got dry after all that hardwork, so I refreshed myself with some Coke. Then it was straight back to the books," Slaughter said.

Learning How the World Works...

One formula at a time.

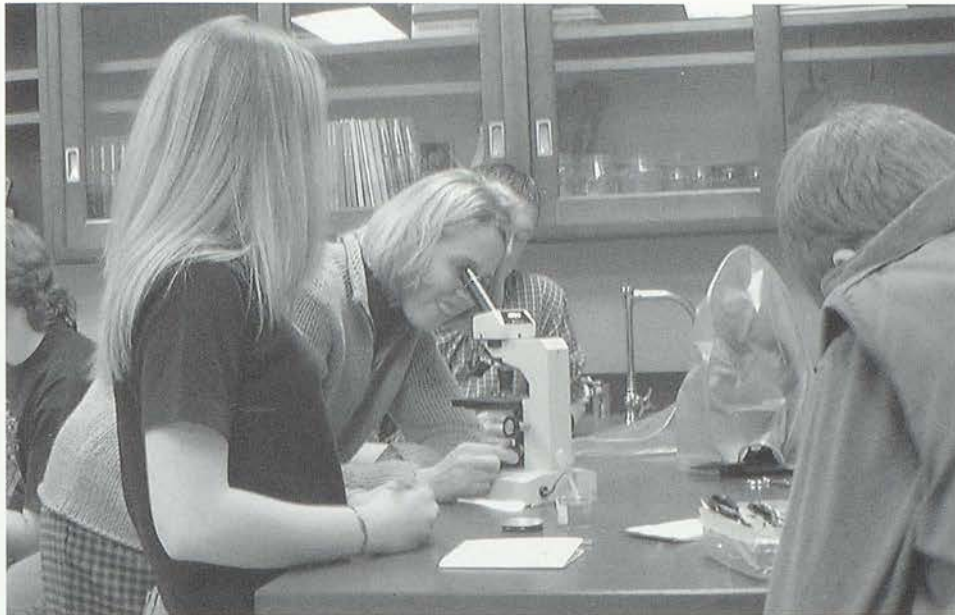

Some students choose to take math and/or science classes all through their high school career, even though only two credits are needed to graduate. Many students feel these classes will make or break them when trying to get into the college of their choice. "Math and science classes are important because I need to get into a college in Europe if I want to be the best doctor alive," sophomore Will Miller said. The counseling office helps to direct students on which classes are needed for which profession they want to enter. "Mrs. Miller told me that I wouldn't need science classes to become an elementary teacher, but I do plan on taking math until I graduate," junior Shannon Altic said.

That's a Tuffy Reconstructing 'Body Bob', junior Chelsy Ripley uses all her strength to put back on his chest muscle. "That thing is really tough to put together. I swear it's like a whole workout by itself," Ripley said.

I Get It "I think that math is very important because you use it every day for everything. I think everyone should be required to take four years of math," junior Erin Slone said.

Let Me Show You How It's Done Getting the microscope in focus for sophomore Maddie Metzger, Mrs. Krueger jumps at the chance to help her students. "Doing labs is one of the easiest things we get to do in science. My favorite lab is when we get to use microscopes," Metzger said.

Josh Damron, junior
 "My parents think math and science are really important. To me, it doesn't really matter, but I will be taking both classes until I graduate. It's all coolio."

Danielle Roberts, sophomore
 "I'm not really good at science, but I know that they are important for many reasons-- in everyday life and for getting into a good college."

Watch That Bacteria Move
 Doing a lab in life science sophomores Lance Crull and Jessica Coles put bacteria on the slide. "Life science is fun especially when we get to look at little bacteria crawling around in food. Yummy!" Coles said.

My Special Box "This is my special chest that is my favorite project this year. When I take it home I will put all of my fireworks, and magazines in it," sophomore Tony Biggs said.

Stress Relievers "Sometimes I just get so mad when I work with plaster. Part of me just wants to destroy my creation. Then I sit back and get my cool, and go with the flow," senior Seth Presley said. Presley is working on a ball that he plans to paint to resemble a soccer ball.

Adam Lafferty
"I like to help out my friends with their projects because I want to be just like the art teacher Ms. Bontewhen I grow up."

Maddie Metzger
"Art is my favorite class. It is full of laughs and giggles. Hanging out with my friends listening to some jams and doing some beautiful artwork is the best thing in the whole world."

My Chest of Wonder In Woods One, students get to make a chest to keep all their goodies in. "When I get done with this chest, I will put all my Star Wars action figures in it," sophomore Josh Glaser said.

Art & Design Meet Mechanization

Expressing yourself one project at a time.

Art and Industry are totally separate unique classes that share similar qualities that allow students to express their individual creativity. "I like taking art because I can just sit back and relax while I create my beautiful masterpieces," senior Danae Hugget said. In art, students are more able to freely express themselves with projects such as the social issue painting done in Art 2. "With the social issue paintings, a student selects a social issue that touches them deeply and then express how it affects them on a canvas," Mrs. Barb Bonte said. The industrial arts include woods class. In woods class students make items such as a chest, shelves, and cabinets depending on what level of woods class the student is in. "I like woods class. I am really good with my hands, so I like to make stuff with my hands. I just made a cabinet by myself, but if I want to keep it, I have to pay for the wood. In my class we have to follow some guidelines, but we still have freedom to add our own personal touch," sophomore Kyle Fuller said. Both of these classes have creative outlets for students to use their individual imagination.

Teaching the Young Apprentices Showing his Art and Design students a little demonstration of the world of clay is Mr. Mike Williams. "They know they want my perfect pot, but they can't have it," Williams said.

Two Classes; One Goal

Students seeing themselves as fit, and fit as fun.

Everyone is required to take health class during their freshman year. This class covers CPR, personality and stress behavior, drugs, family living, and nutrition. The class also encourages students to make good choices.

"I think it's a real benefit to them," Ms. Linda Hoover said. "Unfortunately, I don't think freshmen realize that it's a benefit to them."

The numerous P.E. classes offer all students a variety of ways to achieve and maintain physical fitness.

"In P.E. nine class, it's pretty much an overview of the sports, recreational, and fitness activities. The team oriented sports class is only team oriented sports; it's a focus on team sports. Redskin fitness is weight training and cardio vascular improvement; it helps get you physically fit," Mrs. Julie Hendricks said. "In all the courses, we want to make sure that students have the skills and enjoy the activities, so they pursue it in their adult lives."

Saving Lives Learning how to save lives by learning CPR are freshmen Kayla Leach, Doug Murphy, Rebecca Arnold, and Becky Kish. "I like doing CPR because I know what to do in case of emergencies. Everyone should know [how to do it] at least," Leach said. "I think it's really educational and I got my health certificate so I can do it on other people," Arnold said.

Capture the Footballs Guarding the footballs for her team is sophomore Becky Woods. "I was thinking about winning the game. It was a fun game. I like it because it's exciting; it gets my adrenaline going," Woods said.

The Arm Bone's Connected to the What? Working on a worksheet in health class is freshman Joe Caron. "The nutrition [is my favorite part], I guess, because it starts to go into biology and how your body works and that's interesting to me," Caron said.

Danielle Petersen, sophomore
 "I hate gym because it's boring. There's nothing to do. I talk to my friends to pass the time. I have to take P.E. with the freshmen because I just moved here."

Amy Baker, freshman
 "My favorite part of being in gym is sleeping...you burn 1.1 calories per minute."

I'll Be Watching You Sitting on the sidelines are freshmen Amber Petersen and Doran Siebert. "[My favorite part about gym class is] watching some hotties play hockey...notice Doran's not playing (just joking)," Petersen said. "We were watching floor hockey because we were waiting for our turn to play," Siebert said.

Hard Work? Or Just Playing Around with Dough?

Concentrating hard on making the perfect crust is senior Steve Albaugh. "I wanted it just right so I could have the best quiche in the class," Albaugh said.

Does the Light Come on When Its Done?

Not knowing if their food is done or not are juniors Nikki Applegate and Brittany Miko. "We are awesome cooks, but the oven takes to long," Miko said.

Food is Fun
"I just have fun in Home Economics. The food is my favorite part, I think I could be a chef, possibly," senior Ryan Meeder said.

Livin' it Up
"I live it up in Home Economics! We have so much fun cooking and cleaning, well not really cleaning, but the cooking is definitely fun," junior Chelsey Ripley said.

Patty Cake Patty Cake
Patting their round doughy crust are seniors Erin Simmons and Jayna Goodrich. "I just wanted a nice crust, one to brag about," Simmons said. "It was kind of hard the get the crusts together because they kept cracking," Goodrich said.

My Kitchen is My Stadium

My counter is my court.

Cooking is not a sport, but some might say it is. "I take cooking very seriously, like it's my game," junior Doug Van Dyke said.

The Home Economic classes are now being taught by Mrs. Tobey, formerly of the Marshall Middle School. She replaced Mrs. Knaack after her retirement last year. "Mrs. Tobey puts the low-down on the cooking utensils. She will definitely get on your case if you put any liquid in the dry measuring cups because when you put flour or something dry in there, then it sticks to the sides," senior Heather Hoag said.

The classes in Home Economics teach many kids basic skills about living and cooking for themselves. "Home Economics has taught me how to make my own food, and how to do it right. Now, when I go off to college, I won't starve because I don't know how to make anything," senior Jon Booth said.

Faster Faster! Trying to hurry are juniors Derek Carey, Cassidy Burnes, and Nikki Sheeks. "Nikki and Cassidy take too long and always go so slow," Carey said.

Cindy Moore

Congratulations on your graduation. In looking back, it seems like yesterday that you came into our lives. Little did we know what adventures we had in store and how it would change us forever.

What a beautiful young lady you have become over the years. We will always remember your smile and your love of life. Your tenacious drive to reach the lofty goals that you set for yourself. Then relentlessly working toward those goals until they were in your grasp.

You once told us that "if anyone said your name they couldn't help but smile". In looking back, it was an exciting moment of self-discovery, which gave you great joy. There was never a doubt in our minds because we always knew.

We await the new adventures you will take us on in the future and wish you happiness in everything you do. As your parents, we will never be able to express in words our deepest appreciation, pride, and love we have for you. You have warmed our hearts with the sound of your voice, the twinkle in your eye, and, oh yes, that beautiful smile.

*Love,
Mom and Dad*

Marie Scov

*You have given us so many wonderful moments in these years past and they have passed too quickly. It's hard to conceive that our youngest son will soon be leaving home to follow a flight path of his own. You have been a source of pride and joy as we have watched you focus so intently on your goals from such a young age. We wish you all the best for your future and always remember as you soar to new heights in your field of blue...we love you,
Mom, Dad, Adam, Matt, Shad & Jenny*

Jayna Goodrich

*Jayna--
The time has come for us to let you move on with your life. You have wisdom and faith; be strong. We will always be here for you. We are very proud of you.

Gasp! At a Halloween party for the exchange students are senior Felipe Lackington, freshman Amber Murphy, junior Ken Sink, and senior Yuka Kitamura. When asked why Ken was wearing a dress, Murphy said, "You know Ken. He always likes to push the limit."

Congratulations

to our troublemakers and their friends on all their accomplishments through the years. We love you girls! Rick and Mari

Nick Zalewski

What Joy!

You are a blessing. Follow your heart, keep the faith, and find your dreams. Our love goes with you.
We love you,
Mom, Dad, and Brian

Does this go here? Performing an experiment in Spanish Club are seniors Collin Vincent and Matt Bailey.

Deborah Armour

Deborah we are very proud of you.
Love,
Mom, Dad, & Charity

Shae Redfield

Congratulations, Shae!
We are so proud of you.
Love,
Mom and Jim

Jenna Hurd

From your first day of school to your last, the years have flown by so fast. We couldn't be prouder of the person you are. You have brought us so much joy watching you accomplish your goals. Congratulations. Thank you for who you are. May God continue to guide your path. And remember the "Sun will come up tomorrow" come what may.
Love always,
Mom, Dad, and Family

Josh Petty

Josh,
"Climb high, climb far; your goal, the sky, your aim, the stars." We are so proud of you! We wish you luck as you start the next "climb" of your life.
Love,
Mom & Jessi

Jenny Stulberg

Congratulations Jenny,
Not only for your graduation, but for being the type of individual that makes us proud to be your parents. We love you dearly.
Love,
Mom and Dad

Emily Newton

Congratulations,
Emily.
We are proud of you.
Love,
Mom and Rick

The 2002 Marshall High School Yearbook, The Dial, is 245 pages in length with one full signature and an additional multiple of color. The theme and cover concept were developed by Nick Zalewski and Megan Adams at the Michigan Interscholastic Press Association camp. Their theme and concept took first place in their class. The Dial took 9 individual awards in the fall MIPA competition for the first time since the late 1980s. The yearbook is 9 by 11 inches in size. The printing cost of the yearbooks is $36,000, with around $3,000 coming from the fundraiser, and $8,500 coming from advertising. The yearbook was in severe debt in 1999. Yearbook Advisor Diane Long and her last three staffs have erased that debt.

The student sections were developed by Nick Zalewski and Megan Adams. The ad sections were developed by Emily Boedecker, who was also in charge of ad sales throughout the year.

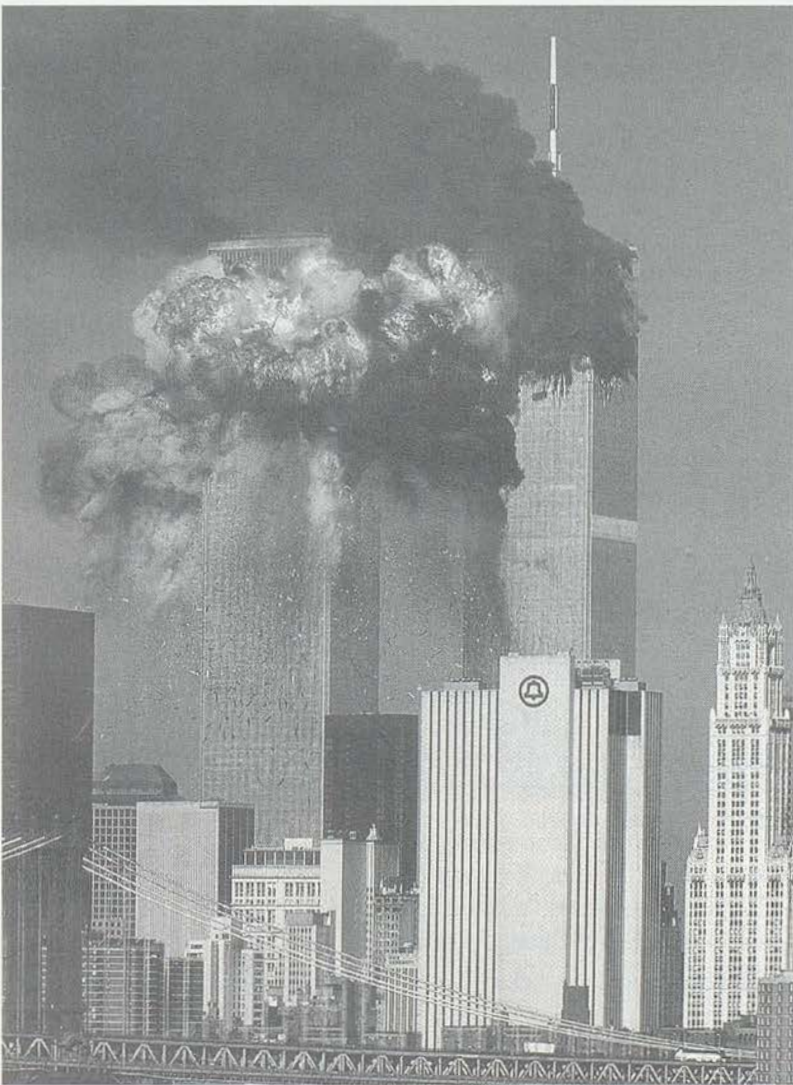

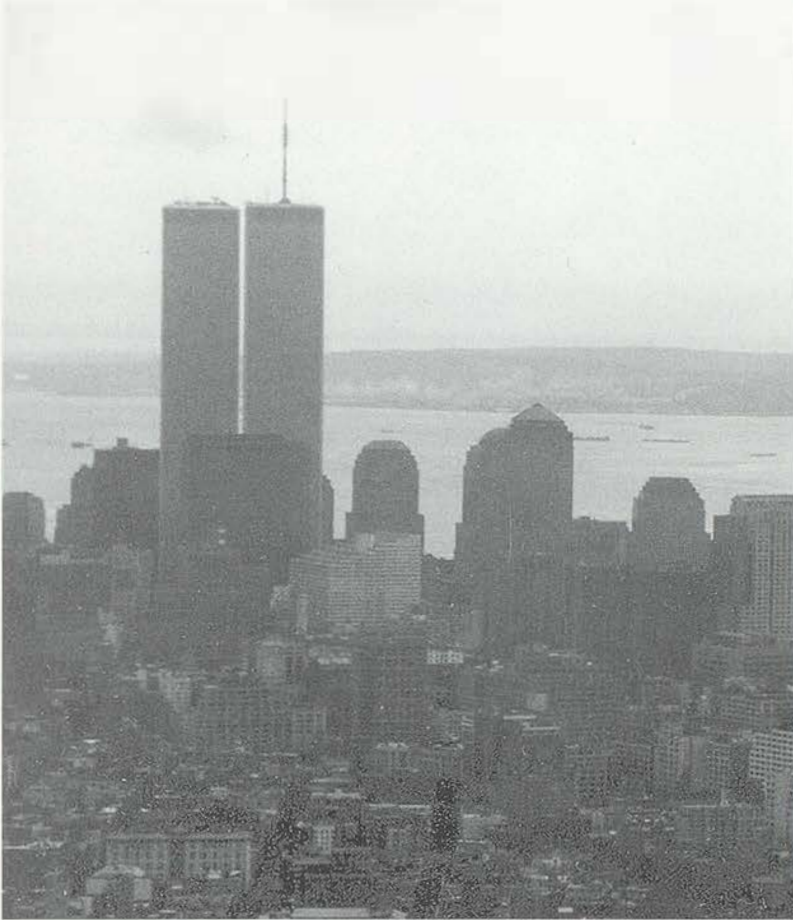

This was the second year of incorporating digital design. This year all layouts were original designs by Nick Zalewski. All traditional black and white pictures were developed by our chief photographer Jeff Hammer. All of the traditionally taken color photos were developed by Color One Photo and at Walmart. This year all pictures were scanned and placed using Photoshop 5.5. Underclass photos and team photos were taken by Prater Studios. Senior pictures were taken by a wide variety of photographers. Photos for the yearbook were taken by all of the students in both of the yearbook classes using two types of digital cameras, Fuji Fine Pics 4700, and a Fuji Mx 2900. All traditional pictures were taken on a Cannon Rebel 2000.

A special thanks to Mike Lafferty, who was our Jostens Representative for his support and encouragement throughout the year. We wouldn't have been able to finish without you.

When the World Was Still Normal Earlier this year, everything in New York City and the world seemed to be sound and in routine. No one could predict the catastrophe that was about to come.

Caught Unaware

As Terror Hits Home

On the early morning of September 11th 2001, acts of terrorism were committed on the eastern coast of the United States. It happened on a Tuesday, and we were in our early morning classes unaware of the events that were taking place on the other side of the country. During seminar when the events were unfolding to the rest of the nation, students watched the television just as the second plane struck the second tower of World Trade Center. "I didn't understand what was going on. I thought it was a movie preview or something. It just didn't seem real," sophomore Beverly Twiss said. Many of us walked through the day speechless and in disbelief. Whether it was direct or indirect, the events of the day affected all of us and changed our lives and the world forever.

Everything Has Changed No one could have imagined something like this would happen in our lifetime. This moment changed the course of history because now the U.S. as well as the world is on full alert for terrorism.

Patriotism Flying High At sunrise just before school begins, the American flag flies high over the school.

Power Tower Sitting high above the football, soccer, and baseball fields is the three-sided Redskin tower.

"I like how it towers over everything else. I wonder if they will put our new logo on it or just take it down," freshman Andy Rector said.

New Beginnings Being displayed at four corners is the new school mascot and logo. "I'm glad we chose this logo because it's going to look very tough on our football helmets," sophomore Cody Stack said.

Signs of Pride Hanging in many windows around the school are stained glass Redskin suncatchers. "It's nice to see that something we sold four or five years ago in econ is still on display in people's classrooms," Mr. Foreman said.

Kiss Me Once a year at the homecoming pep assembly, Renz gives the gym floor a big smooch. "It always makes me excited for the big game," senior Erin Simmons said, "I'm going to miss it."

Ready to Take Flight

Seniors leave the nest as the rest of the student body prepares to take on a new identity.

By a vote of 58%, Redhawks dominated the choices for the new mascot. "Because of the new mascot, a lot of things are going to have to change around here... uniforms, equipment, even the gym floor," junior Josh Deno said. "We are about to get a facelift."

Many students feel that the mascot change will affect their personal identity. "I've always thought of myself as a Redskin, and it will be hard to change. People bleed black and red around here," sophomore

Janna Hibler said. Others feel that the mascot change won't affect them at all because they are simply here to learn. "Being a Redhawk instead of a Redskin will not change who I am because I chose not to get personally involved in the controversy," sophomore Heather Aalbrecht said.

Regardless of the way students feel about the change, it is necessary. "Life is full of changes. This year's mascot change is simply one of them. In the fall, we will be a school struggling for identity, but it doesn't mean that I won't be proud to be a student at MHS," Danny Viso said.
